TO ARREST MISS SEARS

Eleonora Sears, "Fugitive."

The police dragnet is out for the dashing "Eleo," Boston athletic society girl. Her failure to appear in the Salem court has resulted in a warrant for her arrest and an order a State-wide search.

Call Elliott on 'Underground'

POLICE HUNT ON FOR 'ELEO'

Miss Eleonora R. Sears, society's most famous athletic girl, is being sought by the police all over the State.

Judge Sears—no relation of the dashing "Eleo"—in the Salem District Court today issued a warrant for Miss Sears calling on every police officer in Massachusetts to "seize" her "forthwith" and bring her before him.

This action of the court came after the failure of the Back Bay society girl to show up today for the second time at Salem in answer to the complaint accusing her of driving an automobile without the necessary Massachusetts registry.

Judge Sears, before issuing the warrant which is bound to cause a sensation in social circles, declared that Miss Eleonora has defied the laws of the Commonwealth. His warrant reads:

How Warrant Reads.

Warrant for the arrest of Eleonora R. Sears. Every state police officer, every constable, every sheriff and his deputies and every police officer in every city and town in the state is commanded to look for said defendant, and if they find said Eleonora R. Sears of Boston in their precinct, to seize her body forthwith and hold her in custody and bring

Elliott in Boston Home in Few Days

Railroad President Leases House at No. 77 Marlboro Street.

Within the next two weeks, Howard Elliott, the new president of the New Haven road, will be installed with his family in his new home at No. 77 Marlboro street, Back Bay, which he has leased for the Winter. The house is the property of Richard S. Dow, a lawyer, who has lived there for many years. President Elliott will have as his immediate neighbors John P. Reynolds and James C. Bayley.

At present Mr. Elliott, as he expresses it, is "living in his trunk" at a Back Bay hotel.

Roger Wolcott's Son Buys Crocker Farm

William Prescott Wolcott of Milton, son of the late Governor Roger Wolcott, has purchased 122 acres of the farm of Joseph H. Crocker on Randolph street, Canton. Mr. Wolcott will conduct the farm.

Yager to Be Next Porto Rican Head

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Arthur Yager of Georgetown, Ky., is slated to be the next governor of Porto Rico, it was learned at the White House today. Mr. Yager was formerly president of Georgetown College, Kentucky.

Says Bernard Shaw Caused His Suicide

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The works of Bernard Shaw are blamed by a man believed to be C. H. Brown for the state of mind that caused him to take his life. He wrote: "Bernard Shaw has destroyed all my sentiment and romantic illusions."

TO QUERY ELLIOTT ON 'EXPENSES'

The first step in the Public Service Commission's vigorous investigation of the New Haven's "underground fund" was taken today.

The commission today decided to ask President Elliott of the New Haven to furnish the full facts and figures telling how and to whom the fund was disbursed by the New Haven, and particularly for what purpose the $101,000 was spent.

The commission's meeting was to discuss the fund which had been listed in the New Haven's report as "other expenses" and to consider the demand of Governor Foss for an immediate and thorough investigation.

President Elliott has already, both in his telegraphed answers to the AMERICAN'S questions and in his letter to Governor Foss, announced that he stands ready and willing to give the commission all the assistance in his power in the "underground fund" inquiry. This was taken at the State House to indicate that President Elliott's official report of the facts will be forthcoming immediately after he gets the commission's written request.

President Elliott further declared his conviction that it is a right of the public to know just how, why and for what purpose the New Haven spends its money. This led to the belief on Beacon Hill that the commission's work is to be greatly expedited and that full light is to be thrown on the payments by the New Haven road of more than $100,000 to newspaper political reporters, lobbyists and lawyers for "services" and for advertising.

Norwood's Chief Opens Police Safe

Hands Contents to Those Investigating Charges Against Him.

Norwood's official police safe was opened today. No professional safe-cracker "did the job," for it was Chief James W. Lavers himself who walked into the town's police headquarters and solved the town's problem.

"Good morning," said the chief when he appeared much to the surprise of the town officials.

"Good morning," said Acting Chief Bendel, head of the department during the suspension of Lavers.

"Good morning," said the three town Selectmen, who were present.

Then the chief smilingly twirled the knob on the safe to and fro, and presto, the steel door flew open. The contents of the safe were taken in hand by the Selectmen. Then Chief Lavers left the station with a "goodby" to the others.

Brockton Mail Man Hit by Auto

BROCKTON, Oct. 1.—Struck down and run over by an automobile while delivering his mail, Arthur J. Sutton, forty-five, of No. 20 Argyle avenue, and one of the oldest letter carriers in point of service in this city, lies in a dangerous condition at the Brockton Hospital. He was hit while crossing Pleasant street by a motor car owned by Dr. H. F. Rich of Framingham and driven by S. F. Gilson.

The Sensational Statement Thaw Gave Out Today

"It is my firm belief that the friends of the late Stanford White have organized a 'society' for the purpose of railroading the buck to Matteawan.

SENATOR LODGE IS PRONOUNCED OUT OF DANGER

At noon today Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was pronounced practically out of danger, after the extremely serious operation for gastric ulcer performed upon him last Friday.

Dr. Frederick Winslow issued the following bulletin:

Senator Lodge passed the best night he has had since the operation. There are only slight traces of fever. He continues to improve and the crisis is practically passed. There are no symptoms of peritonitis. We hope for a speedy recovery.

Dr. Winslow and Dr. W. Sturgis Bigelow were with Mr. Lodge this morning and planned to stay with him all day. After today, it is expected that he will recover rapidly, with the crisis safely passed, and the danger of peritonitis over.

The operation was a tremendous shock to the Senator, and for two days his vitality was low. An aperture in the stomach wall, caused by the ulcer, was closed by the operation.

Gardner Gives New Warning to Bird

Congressman Gardner is one of our most eloquent little candidates for Governor. After his statement yesterday threatening Mr. Bird with a "good wallop" if he—Bird—didn't quit making charges against Gardner, Mr. Gardner today issued this statement:

"Well, I see that the "Birds in their little nests agreed" yesterday. The whole outfit united in bespattering me. A new Gentlemen-Igbert, Mr. Hill, was hatched and My Lord Bountiful Bird himself calls me a fibber-in-chief and made a few other such statesmanlike observations about me.

"For the second time I warn Mr. Bird that my patience is giving out.

THAW BLAMES STANFORD WHITE'S RICH FRIENDS

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 1.—Sensational exposures involving prominent New York men whom Harry Thaw calls "rich but disreputable friends of Stanford White," are imminent in the Thaw case.

Thaw's charge that Stanford White's friends are paying Jerome's expenses and financially backing him in the attempt to get Thaw ack to Matteawan, was a bombshell in the case today.

HIDDEN STORY TO COME TO LIGHT.

A story apparently likely to come to light which has hitherto been only guessed at. It is the story of a battle between White's old friends and their wealth on the one hand, and the Thaw millions on the other.

"Mr. Blank, and Mr. Rank, and Mr. Bank," says Thaw, "are the men responsible." They are paying the bills and they hope New York State will reimburse them. But I believe they will be disappointed."

The matter of expense is the crux of the whole question. The voters of Dutchess County, New York, are beginning to demand to know:

"Who is paying for Jerome—for his autos, and his special trains, and his assistant lawyers? It is costing thousands of dollars! WHO PAYS?"

County Not Paying, Says Conger.

They put the question to District At-

Harvard Comic Paper and Daily in New War.

"Extra-ee-ee! Harvard's publications go to the mat in battle to the death."

The Harvard Lampoon—joke sheet—wanted an office boy. They put an ad in the Harvard Crimson—real daily newspaper. And the Crimson lampooned the poor ad thus:

BOY WANTED AT LAMPOON.

Pen acrobats and town cutups from the class of 1917 take notice! More voting and drawing men are needed on the Lampoon. Make a joke of it. Bills you.

Sharpen your wits and your pencils, and come round to the Lampoon building tonight at 7 o'clock. The sort of the competition will then be outlined. Be a scream! There are a lot of chestnuts still left on the tree. Get under it and shake down a few! This is your last chance to be funny. Get in before the rush! Be a wag even if you are on the tail end.

And now the Lampoon editors are sharpening their fountain pens and preparing buckets to catch the gore that will flow when they reply.

NEXT SUNDAY'S AMERICAN

EVELYN THAW TELLS THE TRUTH ABOUT STANFORD WHITE

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw tells the true story of her acquaintance with Stanford White—tells it in every detail—in next Sunday's AMERICAN. It is a story pulsing with the blood of life and youth and for a time at least with the joy of innocence. She says:

"White was an earthquake which shattered to the foundation the fabric of my innocence. He was a libertine, and quixotic. Yet Sheridan by some standards was an incorrigible drunkard; Pitt a hopeless gambler, and Alexander Hamilton a libertine. I cite these at random because they were all great men, just as Stanford White was a great man. His failing we know. It was his unfailing.

"He was generously big, and infinitely mean; he was kind and tender—and preyed upon the defenceless. He would shiver at a solecism, a crude expression offended him, yet in somehings he was shameless. He was a benevolent vampire.

"Fate led me to Stanford White, to hours of mad regret, and to days of extraordiiy interest."

DECLARES WHITE'S COMPANIONS AT ORGIES ARE PAYING FOR EXPENSES OF PURSUERS

Jermay Conger of Dutchess County, and Conger replied in effect:

"Don't worry. It isn't costing Dutchess County a cent."

If Dutchess County is not paying, presumably the State of New York is, the refusal denied. But at once it was learned that the State of New York IS NOT PAYING.

"Where is this money coming from?" came the repeated question. Immediately afterward, Jerome, Conger and District Attorney Whitman appealed to Attorney General Carmody and Governor Glynn to LET NEW YORK STATE ASSUME THE EXPENSE.

But Governor Glynn has not yet assented. Neither New York State, nor Duchess County is yet paying the bills. Who is?

The question was put up to a Thaw lawyer here. He replied:

"Powerful and wealthy New Yorkers are financially backing the fight, and they count upon being paid for their expense by New York State."

What Thaw Himself Charges.

Thaw himself says:

It is my firm belief that the friends of the late Stanford White have organized a "society" for the purpose of railroading me back to Matteawan.

They have, in my opinion, pooled together to put up the necessary funds to bear the burden of securing all the counsel, legal and otherwise, for this purpose.

The case from this view resolves itself into a fight financed by wealthy individual citizens to bring back a man the State of New York doesn't want.

For New York doesn't want Thaw. When an insane man escapes from an asylum into another State, there is never an attempt to drag him back.

"Let him go—good riddance," officials say. The State into which he has fled sometimes returns him, rather than assume the expense of caring for him. New York itself has a law under which Thaw, as a citizen of Pennsylvania, should be deported to Pennsylvania.

Mysterious Influence Seen.

But a mysterious and powerful influence has fought to get Thaw back. Thaw himself explained why in early statements:

"They—Mr. Blank and Mr. Blank and Mr. Blank who were intimates of Stanford White in his escapades—are afraid I will expose them."

The names of these men were kept secret at the trial of Thaw. But this new development hints that these names may yet come to light.

The Thaw forces have not been idle, and it is said in New York that they have won a victory.

The story is this: he Dutchess County Grand Jury considered Thaw's case. Then they voted to indict Thaw.

Jerome was notified, and told Governor Felker an indictment had been voted. But, next morning, the indictment was rescinded.

Now from the office of Attorney General Carmody of New York Stateall comes the statement that Thaw influences brought about this rescinding of the indictment, and a Thaw lawyer here—giving evidence of the close watch the Thaw attorneys kept on the grand jury, said today:

"We knew no indictment had been voted—even at the time Jerome made his claim. We knew it from a member of the grand jury. But we could not betray his confidence by contradicting Jerome."

Glynn May Order Inquiry.

On the basis of this charge of "undue influence," Attorney General Carmody has asked Governor Glynn to order a special investigation of the entire case, and Governor Glynn may order this investigation today. If he does, a tremendous scandal is predicted.

Thaw himself freely discusses the work of Jerome in New York. He said just after breakfast today:

"Jerome is standing on his hind legs. He is evidently at the end of his rope.

"I'd like to get, out of his present activities, evidence that he was lying when he said an indictment had been voted.

"Do you think Jerome was lying?" he was asked.

"Isn't that the only logical assumption?" Thaw rejoined.

George F. Morris, a Lancaster attorney, acting for Thaw, today discussed the possibility of Jerome's taking drastic steps to seize Thaw should extradition be refused. He left his work with the other attorneys on the brief to be presented to Felker, and said:

Jerome mustn't forget that Judge Aldrich issued an injunction forbidding anyone from interfering with Thaw while the habeas corpus writ is pending.

Jerome wouldn't dare seize Thaw, even if he had a Matteawan guard here to make the arrest.

"There is no process of law which can get immediate action for Jerome. He may, however, go to the Probate Court, charge Thaw is insane, and ask his return as a "ward of New York.

We would welcome such a test of Thaw's sanity."

Governor Felker today said that he has not received any indictment against Thaw.

"If there is one, in such an important matter, it should be put before he at once," he said.

THAW CHARITABLE EVEN TO HIS ORGANIZED TRADUCERS

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 1.—Harry K. Thaw is possessed of a man's full allotment of charity. While his frequent donations to charitable and religious institutions and his more public contributions to hotel attaches and public servants have brought the Thaw millions into the light of both favorable and adverse comment, there is a Thaw charity not measured by ounces. That he possesses the "milk of human kindness" in the proudest boast of his friends, even his enemies audibly admit.

Concord has seen ample evidence of this charity that harbors no evil thought and bears no malice. The most spontaneous of this staid old city's population says with a vigorous sincerity that "Harry is the salt of the earth."

Thaw's most intimate confidents advise him that a group of young men have come to Concord with the evident intention of creating a local antagonism for him. So insistent are Thaw's friends that he is moved to the belief that their advice is true. While reports come to him daily that the young men stand in the hotel lobby, in the very shadow of his doorway and characterize him as "crazy Thaw," and names of similar purport, Thaw does not give his head a protest. Neither does he rebuke these men, with whom he comes in almost daily contact.

Thaw Stops Tirade.

The contrast is remarkable. While a reporter sat beside Thaw in his room, a Thaw adherent came in and the news that the verbal attacks upon him had been renewed. When the informant began a tirade upon the characters of the young besmirchers, Thaw quickly arose and admonished him, saying, "Stop, the boys are not here to defend themselves." Conversation was resumed in a different channel.

When Thaw was informed that a report that he was involved in difficulties with the local attorneys was circulated he again made manifest the remarkable spirit of tolerance.

"The report is absolutely unfounded, of course," he said. "My attorneys and I have a thorough understanding. It is possible that a wave of public sentiment may be inspired against me, but an untruth can never be permanent damage."

Finally the Thaw lawyers became exasperated and issued a statement in complete denial of the report. The news it was said, had issued a statement to the effect that he would return to New York and demand immediate trial if Jerome would produce the indictment he told Governor Felker was returned by the Dutchess County Grand Jury, and that he had failed to consult his attorneys.

Lets Shurtleff Amend It.

Knowledge that the report was untrue was then in the hands of three newspapermen. The three newspapermen were sitting in the Thaw room waiting for the typewritten statement when Thaw requested one of them to call Merrill Shurtleff of Lancaster, a Thaw attorney who is always at hand.

When Mr. Shurtleff arrived Thaw passed the manuscript to him for further suggestions. Shurtleff recommended the striking out of several lines and the substitution of other phrases. Thaw abided by Shurtleff's decision and the statement finally issued was approved in its entirety by the lawyer.

Attorney Nathaniel E. Martin and Judge Chase, who were at Mr. Martin's office preparing the brief to be submitted to Governor Felker, were asked if they were disappointed that they were not consulted. They replied that they were working steadily upon the brief, and that Mr. Shurtleff was in command of the situation at the hotel. They were evidently satisfied. Judge Chase said that he certainly would not discuss the report that Thaw had taken the matter into his own hands until he obtained definite knowledge that the report was true.

Invites Opponent to Dine.

Thaw knew that the report was unfounded. Yet he offered no comment. He maintained the characteristic charitable silence. His treatment of the men opposed to him has attracted most favorable comment. He ate dinner yesterday with Attorney Bernard L. Jacobs, of Lancaster, who is maintained by the opposing forces of Jerome. Mr. Jacobs was presented to Thaw by Mr. Shurtleff.

"Very glad to meet you, Mr. Jacobs. Was Thaw's pleasant greeting. "Won't you sit down and have a bite to eat with me?"

Jacobs sat beside Thaw throughout the dinner hour and they chatted pleasantly. When he arose to depart Jacobs said that "Thaw talked rationally enough during the short time I was with him." Like Thaw, the opposing lawyer from Lancaster enjoys a local popularity. With reference to the dinner episode one of Thaw counsel said of Mr. Jacobs:

"He does not regard this as a man-to-beast affair, like the much-heralded letter from New York, but as a man-to-man affair."

Never Unkind Word for Wife.

Though the newspapers have at various times credited Evelyn Nesbit Thaw with harsh criticism of her former husband, it is said by the men closest to Thaw that he has not uttered an ungentlemanly reference to her. There undoubtedly dwells in his mind, they say, the knowledge that he, a man of refinement and culture, gave to the name of Thaw and disposed of the man he believed to have harmed her; and also the further fact that she is responsible for the bitter tirades that have appeared in the public print.

Whether the statements are true, Thaw's friends say that he believes that Evelyn was actually responsible for them. The same friends assert that Thaw has never spoken an unkind word in connection with the name of Evelyn.

A TYPICAL DAY FOR HARRY; EVERY HOUR HAS ITS TASK

Harry K. Thaw is a busy man and so are his lawyers. Thaw's energy is inspiring. So eagerly does he devour the work that is placed before him in daily routine that the contagion is effective. Brief acquaintanceship with Thaw quickly revives latent energy.

Yesterday was a typical day. Thaw arose shortly before 7 o'clock. After his morning bath he took up the newspapers and eagerly scanned every reference to the legal predicament which succeeded his escape from the asylum at Matteawan. Industriously clipping the salient features of each news story, he assorted them into two groups, one containing the encouraging references to his fight for liberty, the other describing the merciless efforts of Jerome to return him to New York. Editorial references to him were divided with equal care.

With this work disposed of, he turned his attention to the mass of letters delivered in the morning mail. His method of replying to his friends guarantees no mistake. Having noted the contents of each letter, he writes the name and address of the author upon a sizable sheet of paper, and also his reply. These messages are ultimately placed in the hands of his busy secretary, who types and writes the replies upon Thaw stationery.

Thaw went to breakfast at 8:30 o'clock. Accompanying him were his secretary, Deputy Sheriff Holman A. Drew and Patrolman C. D. Stevens of the Concord police department who is assigned to special service in the Thaw case under United States Marshal E. P. Nute. Thaw left the table shortly after 9 o'clock and entered the barbershop adjoining the Eagle Hotel. After he had been shaved, he returned to his room, where he remained until 1 o'clock reading the newspapers and dictating replies to the encouraging messages contained in his bulky mail.

THE LOVE STORY OF HARRY AND EVELYN

CHAPTER XXXIII.

"My nearest and dearest enemy."—MIDDLETON.

After Detective Bergoff had discovered that Harry Thaw was paying for his shadowing of Stanford White, Bergoff hastened to telephone White that he had "something important" to tell him. White arranged to meet Bergoff at the bar of the Herald Square Hotel. They sat at a table and, just as White was about to raise a glass of whiskey to his lips, Bergoff told him that Thaw was the man at his heels. Bergoff's diary continued, as follows:

"White trembled violently, shaking from his head to his feet. So overcome was he that he spilled his whiskey in raising his glass to his lips. 'I suspected it all along,' he groaned, 'but what I wanted was the proof.'

"June 1—In the course of our almost daily association, Mr. White and I had become quite intimate. I asked him: 'Why is Thaw doing this?'

"'Bergoff, I'll tell you,' was his sober response, 'this man Thaw is crazy; he imagines that I have done him some wrong.'

"Mr. White paused and breathed heavily, as though undergoing some deep emotion. Then he added: 'I used to know his wife. I befriended her and her family.'

"'He should be very grateful,' I commented.

"'But I say Thaw is crazy,' replied White, 'crazy as a bedbug—and insanely jealous of his wife. He doubtless imagines I am meeting her. BUT BEFORE GOD I AM NOT. My friendship for the girl was from a purely fatherly interest. And since her marriage she has repaid my kindness by annoying me greatly by making remarks to different acquaintances of mine, such remarks intended to arouse the jealousy of her husband. In a few days I expect to go abroad. I expect to join Harry Payne Whitney and a party of friends on the other side and I'll be —— if I want to be annoyed by those bloodhounds.'"

Bergoff's diary next related how Thaw's detectives, posing as Lord Roberts and secretary, managed to ascertain the date of White's intended departure to Europe.

Meanwhile Detective Kuhrt, according to Bergoff, had been making splendid progress. He learned from Detective Rorke that not only was White being trailed but that many of his feminine friends were being shadowed.

Bergoff described the annoyance caused White, at his departure abroad, by Thaw's detectives at the pier. Then the diary continued thus:

July 8, (1905.)—While Mr. White was away close surveillance was kept upon the Thaw detectives, who were following many young women known to Mr. White and his friends. The manner in which these young women were annoyed was shameful. One was even pursued into the White Mountains, where she went for a vacation. Some of these actresses had complained to Mr. White that they were being annoyed, and he told me to have it stopped.

"'Mr. White,' I said to him at one time, 'the only way to have it end is to cause the arrest of the sleuths who are doing the work.'

"'That would bring the young ladies into unpleasant notoriety,' was his answer. 'See if you cannot find some other way to break up the annoyance.'

"September 10 I suggested to Mr. White that he retaliate by putting men out after Thaw and his wife. But Mr. White returned to me: 'Then I would be the equal of Thaw. I trust that I am above such mean conduct. I am not afraid of that man. I am not doing more than any other man would do.' At the same time Mr. White would lose color from his cheeks at the mention of Thaw's name and would bite his lips, as he did when I first told him and gave him proof that Thaw was hiring the detectives.

"Sept. 15.—'Bergoff,' said White to me, 'This Thaw man will stop at nothing now my life is always in danger.' White had been followed from his office.

"I replied: 'You should be covered by one of my men at all times.' Then White laughed, made a jest of the whole affair and said: 'O, pshaw! I can't be bothered with having a man around all the time. People would notice it.'

"Sept. 15—To be arrested is just what that fellow wants. He is crazy for notoriety,' said White to me, 'but I must control my feelings and disappoint him. Maybe in time he will come to see the injustice of his position toward me.

"Out of sheer curiosity I tried to get White to speak of Mrs. Thaw. He never would do so, nor would he speak of any other woman of his past or present acquaintance, and I was very near to him.

"Sept. 19.—Mr. White has made a year's contract with me for detective work. I was only to come when Mr. White felt that my services were needed.

"Sept. 25.—Thaw had been to such people as Anthony Comstock and others of the ilk and traps were set for Mr. White to fall into. Children were placed in the way of the architect, but I want to say that he was never tempted, only annoyed.

"June 14, 1906—(Eleven days before the shooting)—I called at Mr. White's office, being in that neighborhood. He had only a few days returned from a trip into Canada. He looked fit and was in excellent humor.

"'They are after me again,' he said in a merry way. 'Have them locked up,' I insisted again. 'I am going to have something done before long,' was his answer. There the matter rested.

"I once suggested to Mr. White that perhaps his wife might be the person concerned, meaning Mrs. White. He ridiculed the idea, saying: 'That is absurd. What could she be doing such a thing for? I am not doing anything to be ashamed of.'

"June 26—I called at Mr. White's office and was told that the architect did not leave his office until 8 o'clock the previous night. Four men were in an automobile outside the office and they were recognized as McKenna detectives. When Mr. White was warned of the detectives in the street he remarked that it was about time to close up the matter. He said that he was a nervous wreck and that on the following day he was going to call up my office and take final action in the courts.

"But Harry K. Thaw shot and killed White last night."

Such was the amazing narrative of Detective Bergoff. It showed plainer than anything else had done how Stanford White was really afraid, toward the end, lest Thaw do him an injury.

WAS EVELYN WORTH SAVING?

Was Evelyn Nesbit Thaw worth saving?

This question is still arousing much interest. Gertrude Atherton, the novelist, who created a furore by stating that Evelyn was not worth saving has a few supporters.

Here are a few more letters expressing the opinions of readers:

"White Worth More."

It is at all times dangerous for one to express an honest opinion, but in connection with this discussion I must take the side of Mrs. Atherton. I am not ready to justify Stanford White, but do believe that he was worth more to the world than Evelyn. Certainly his death failed to right a wrong. Worse could have been punished and would have been. They took the law into his own hands and killed his rival. When he tired of Evelyn he was ready to cast her aside in the same manner that White did. White, though, had accomplished something in the world. Evelyn and Harry have not accomplished anything in this world and never will. One is as bad as the other. Neither be worth saving. There is nothing left to save.

MRS. HANNAH CLARK.

Has Forgiven Her.

Although much has been said concerning the dark side of Evelyn Thaw's life, I am inclined to believe that the world in general has forgiven her and stands ready to accept her in society. I do not use the word "society" in the sense that it means the so-called feeble 400, but the society of the average person.

I am sure that Evelyn is of more importance to the world than the ordinary frivolous society girl. If Evelyn is treated kindly by the average person she will be satisfied. I am sure she is deserving of that.

LS WHY RL JILTS ZERRAHN

he engagement between Paul Zerahn and Madeline Brown has been nally broken and young Zerrahn has gone away to rehabilitate himself," according to a formal statement issued today by George H. Brown, father of the girl.

Zerrahn lives in Milton and the girl in Quincy. He disappeared after their engagement had been announced. They were to have been married about mid-October and he had engaged an apartment in Lowell, where he worked. In the apartment, furniture, and belongings of Miss Brown, sent there preparatory to the marriage, have been attached for an alleged debt of Zerrahn's.

Brown Clears Up Mystery.

Brown's statement, tending to clear up the mystery which has surrounded the case, is as follows:

Mrs. Brown and I have heretofore refrained from making any statement for publication concerning the cancelment of the plans for the marriage of our daughter Madeline to Paul Zerrahn, since we considered it a personal matter in which the public had no interest.

It is, therefore, perhaps needless for me to add that this discussion of my family affairs in the press is exceedingly distasteful to me, and I cannot help expressing surprise that and editor of a respectable newspaper would permit the unauthorized publication of my daughter's picture.

However, since so many misleading statements have been printed, I feel compelled in justice to my family to make public these facts:

Tells of Business Disclosures.

Very recent disclosures concerning Paul Zerrahn's business affairs at Lowell were of such a serious nature to me that Mrs. Brown and I decided that the marriage could not take place and that the engagement should be terminated.

Our views were fully concurred in by our daughter, as well as by the young man's parents. The alleged illness of the young man, which has been given wide publicity, has had nothing to do with our action in this matter.

In view of the assurance this morning by Mr. Zerrahn, Sr., that his son had left this vicinity to rehabilitate himself and will not return, I have agreed not to make any further public statement of the affair, and I trust the newspapers will now respect our wishes and permit the matter to be closed with the publication of this statement.

Seminole Club Ball on Tonight

The social season in Roxbury will be opened this evening in the Intercolonial Hall, No. 214 Dudley street, when the Seminole Club gives its eleventh annual Autumn dancing party.

Albert Miller, the treasurer, promises the kind of dancing and the sort of a social time that should set the pace for all similar affairs to follow in Boston this Winter, and his statement is backed up by President William Doherty, Vice-President Edmund Winslow, Secretary Edward Doherty, and by Stephen Frazier, sergeant-at-arms.

Miss Ethelinda Morgan to Wed

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 1.—The engagement of Miss Ethelinda Morgan to Lloyd Derby, both of New York, was announced by the mother of the bride-to-be today. The prospective bride is the daughter of Mrs. William Rogers Morgan. Her fiance is a brother of Richard Derby, whose marriage to Ethel Roosevelt, daughter of former President Roosevelt, took place some time ago. Both families are prominent in social circles.

Confirm Sale of Everybody's Store

Judge Dodge today confirmed the sale of Everybody's Store, Inc., for $199,800, to D. L. Robertson and A. D. Rice. The amount is in excess of the company's liabilities. Counsel for the receivers for the Butler stores informed the court that the dividend to the general creditors of Everybody's Store, which was owned by the Butler stores, will be at least 80 cents on the dollar.

"White Slaver" Is Given Two Years

Miltiadis Kutsumekos was today sentenced to two years in State's Prison for violation of the White Slave act by Judge Bingham in the United States District Court. Kutsumekos lives in Lowell, and was convicted by a jury of bringing Ethel White from State to State for immoral purposes.

Yeggs Wreck West Medway Postoffice

Several robbers today entered the post office at West Medway and in attempting to blow open the safe wrecked the place. The safe was demolished. The discovery was made by Postmaster Daniel S. Woodman. He was unable to say how much cash or stamps were taken or destroyed.

Astor and Shonts on Schmidt Jury

Vanderbilt and Rockefeller Are Excused from Duty.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Vincent Astor, Theodore P. Shonts and Mortimer Hegeusberg will serve on the Aumuller jury Friday," said Coroner Feinberg today. "Hans Schmidt, the confessed murderer of Miss Aumuller, will appear before the jury."

Cornelius Vanderbilt begged to be excused on the ground he was a member of the National Guard and was exempt, time of the jury subpoenas was sent to "J. D. Rockefeller, No. 26 Broadway."

A reply stated that John D. Rockefeller was more than seventy years of age, over the age limit for jury service.

JAILED 5,000 MORE IN 1913 FOR DRINKING

Crime in general, but more particularly drunkeness, is on the increase in Boston. A comparison of the number of complaints entered in the Boston Municipal Court for the years 1912 and 1913 shows that there were nearly 5,000 more complaints this year for intixication than last. The exact figures are 48,125 in 1913 as against 53,978 for the previous year.

Courts Closed to Honor Dead Deputy

Joseph G. Paine's Brother Officers His Pallbearers.

At the request of District Attorney Pelletier, Judge Dana adjourned the sessions of the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court at noon today, out of respect to the late Deputy Sheriff Joseph G. Paine of Upham's Corner, an officer of the courts for twenty-five years, who died Monday after a brief illness. Public services were held at the Baker Memorial Church, Upham's Corner at 1:30 today.

The following of his brother court officers were pallbearers: Irving Campbell, Forrest Starr, Robert McIntosh, Edward Wilson, George Mitchell and Frank Pierce.

James J. Morgan was appointed court officer to take the place of Daniel Noonan, retired. Morgan is a Democrat and lives at No. 350 Arborway, Jamaica Plain.

Leiters Take Ailing Orchid Back to Orient

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—When the yacht Niagara, in which Mrs. Leiter will make a tour of the world, steamed out of Washington today, it carried a rare orchid cherished by the late Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter which has refused to blossom since her death last Winter.

The Leiters are to take the exotic back to the orchard from whence it came to have it doctored in its native climate.

Miss Gillespie Is Renominated

Eight Other Names Sent to Council by Governor.

Governor Foss today sent nine nominations to the Executive Council, among them the renomination of Miss Mabel Gillespie of Boston as a member of the Minimum Wage Commission.

The other nominations were: Francis W. Sprague, 2nd, of Newton, to be clerk of the Newton Police Court; Clarence C. Smith, Newton, recorder of Land Court; Frank H. Howes, Newton, Free Public Lecturer; Commissioner Dr. Charles F. DeGanal, Warren, medical examiner of the Ninth Worcester District, and Jr. James C. Austin, Spencer, as his assistant; Linda L. Jaquith, Worcester, member of the Board of Registration of Nurses; Frances P. Brady, special justice District Court of Worcester, and George H. Post, Amherst, commissioner of accounts for the Boston & Maine railroad.

License Transfer Refused in Roxbury When Residents Protest.

The Licensing Board has rejected the application for transfer of liquor license made by Peter P. Graham of No. 648 Parker street, Roxbury, to locate at No. 2506 Dudley street and No. 57 Winslow street, Roxbury, in the place now occupied by the mission of which the Rev. William Le Sage is the minister.

The rejection was the result of a strong protest made by residents of the vicinity. A hearing was given today by the board on the application of S. A. S. Devine of No. 2448 Washington street, Roxbury, who wants a location at Dudley street and Harrison avenue. Roxbury ministers and church workers were present and protested. A decision will be made later.

WALTHAM WARS ON MISS RYAN

A veritable tempest of protest and denunciation has arisen against the "politicians and labor unions" who have forced Miss Ida Annah Ryan to resign her position as Assistant Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds in Waltham.

Miss Ryan was appointed by Mayor Duane, and in her resignation said the persecution to which he had been subjected forced her to resign.

Mrs. Susan Y. Fitzgerald, president of the Massachusetts Political Equality Union, did not mince words in discussing the case. "An outrage. No other word will characterize it justly," she exclaimed. She continued:

Calls It "An Outrage."

Miss Ryan is a graduate of Technology. Here is a woman thoroughly capable of filling a responsible position and proving herself efficient in all its details, obliged to give it up because of political influences.

If women had the vote the politicians would never have dared to take the defensive against this woman. But it is simply another case to go upon record that certain types of politicians do not care to have women in responsible positions which they can fill as they want them for their political friends.

Just as soon as women get into salaried positions, the politicians are on the alert to get rid of them. They are willing to have women serve in jobs where they do not get any pay.

There was no real objection to Miss Ryan, except that she was occupying a position which the politicians wanted for some of their friends, as far as I can see. This condition can never be remedied, until women get the ballot. As long as women are without the ballot, their efficiency will not count with a class of men who simply assume office to control votes in their own interests.

Was Appointed by Duane.

Mayor Duane named Miss Ryan as assistant to Thomas Lally, superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds at a salary of $1,200 a year. Something happened a month ago, when Superintendent Lally gave Miss Ryan fourteen days in which to resign. After a conference with the Mayor the Superintendent made a compromise by which Miss Ryan was to stay in his employ at a salary of $900 a year, with working days reduced to four a week.

Miss Ryan said nothing about the compromise in her behalf, but sent in her resignation after her arrival in Portland, Me., where she had gone to visit some of her relatives.

In her letter she says:

I regret that circumstances do not permit my giving you suitable notice, but hope you will overlook that irregularity in view of the persecution to which you have so many times told me you are subjected on my account from various politicians and labor unions.

MISS IDA ANNAH RYAN, first woman public officeholder in Waltham, who has resigned as the result of a battle over politics in the Watch City.

WARRANT OUT FOR ARREST OF "ELEO" SEARS

her to the first district court forthwith.

Immediately after the warrant was issued steps were taken to notify the police to be on the lookout for Miss Sears. The society girl had been summoned to appear in court last Saturday, but instead of appearing she wrote Mr. court a note saying she did not know any "Eleanor" Sears, as her name had been written in the original summons. So Judge Sears ordered a second summons served at the Sears Summer house at Pride's Crossing Saturday night. This ordered "Eleonora R. Sears" to be in court today.

Court opened at 9 o'clock today. Miss Sears was not in the room.

"We'll wait a while," said the court.

Failed to Apper.

Over in the dock sat six men charged with minor offences. The case against Miss Sears was scheduled to come first. Judge Sears waited until 9:30. Then he spoke to the clerk.

"Eleanora R. Sears," said the clerk. No response.

None of the lawyers present made any motion to indicate they might have been retained as counsel for Miss Sears.

"Eleonora R. Sears," called the clerk again.

Again no response.

"S. Walter Woodbury," called the clerk after a word from the bench.

Woodbury is the chief of police of Beverly. It was he who originally summoned Miss Sears on a complaint that she had been driving an auto—it was Harold Vanderbilt's touring car—without having a Massachusetts registry.

Up stood Chief Woodbury.

"How about this?" said Judge Sears sharply. "Did you serve the summons?"

Woodbury (his voice trembling): "Well, your honor, we left the new summons at the home of Miss Sears Saturday night. It was properly made out against Eleonora R. Sears. We expected she would be here today."

Judge Sears—Did you see the young lady yourself?

Woodbury—No, I didn't.

Judge—Well, now, just what did you do?

Chief—Well, we went out there to her Summer home and they told us she wasn't there yet, so we left the summons. I think we carried out the provisions of the law which say we can leave the summons at the last place of abode if we can't find the person.

Judge—Mr. Sears's this young lady been in Beverly since last Saturday. Couldn't you or your police find her?

Chief—Yes.

Sometimes she runs an auto. Sometimes she goes in other people's autos. Sometimes she rides on horseback. Sometimes she is driving. She is going, going, going all the time.

Judge—Well, was she going so fast that the police couldn't get her?

Chief—We did the best we could, Your Honor.

Judge—Doing the best you could? It looks very much to my mind as if you weren't doing the very best you could when you simply left that summons at the Summer home. It was not good service by the police. It was an improper service. Do you know that the young lady has been riding around in Beverly since Saturday last and that not even yesterday she passed through Salem on horseback?

Chief—Yes, but I felt that the serving of the summons was enough.

Criticizes Police.

Judge—Well, she may be in New York now for all I know or for all you know. But she soon goes fast. How do we know where she is now. She has set the laws of this Commonwealth at defiance.

Chief—Well, I did the best I could under the law.

Judge—Well you didn't do very well. I'll issue a warrant for the immediate arrest of Eleonora R. Sears. She has evidently gone fast enough to get away from Beverly and perhaps you may have nothing more to do with it. But the warrant that I will issue will be given to you. You will do the best you can with it, but it will compel the police of this whole State to arrest Eleonora R. Sears and to bring her in here just as they would others looking at the six men waiting to be arraigned on a lower floor.

Without a moment's delay Judge Sears then began filling out the warrant, taking unusual care to get the name right—Eleonora R. Sears. This writ he then turned over to Chief Woodbury and the hunt for the best known of Boston's society girls was begun.

News Stand Girls Join at Midnight

First Union of the Kind to Be Organized Tonight.

Midnight meetings of the 117 girls employed on the newsstands in the subway and on the "L," to obligate them as trade unionists, are scheduled at the Warrenton street rooms of the Boston Women's Trade Union League tonight. One hundred of the girls will be obligated and election of officers will follow at the time their union charter is delivered.

These girls are employed by the Hotel & Railroad News Company and are to affiliate with the Retail Clerks' Union. J. J. Kiernan, international president of that organization, will be present at tonight's meeting. He will be assisted by Frank H. McCarthy, organizer of the A. F. of L., with the Misses Mabel Gillespie and Alma Wisner of the league as aids.

This is the first union composed wholly of newsstand girls ever organized.

'Handsomest Couple' on Their Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. James Hope Nelson Sail for England.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Mrs. James Hope Nelson, the bride who as Isabel Valle of St. Louis was declared by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish to be the most beautiful girl in America, is on the ocean today with her husband, beginning an extended honeymoon tour which will take her over England and the Continent. The couple—pronounced one of the handsomest ever to sail out of this port—are to reside on the husband's estate at Ratsford Park, Moreton-in-Marsh, Leicestershire, England.

The Valle-Nelson wedding attracted attention, not only because of the bride's great beauty, but also because a papal blessing was read at the ceremony. Miss Valle had joined the Catholic Church of Valle had joined the Catholic Church, of St. Louis girl was wooed by young Nelson at her home, in Vancouver and in Alaska, and it came as a surprise to their friends when their engagement was announced.

Wants Court to Say He's Not Married

Jacob, Sued for Non-Support, Says Becky Is Not His Wife.

Jacob Berkewitz wants the divorce court to "look into the matter" of his alleged marriage to Becky Fidelowsetz. Their parties and witnesses, and establish the rights of the parties." He is being sued for non-support by the woman, while he declares that never married her and she has no right to use his name.

Berkewitz declares that in May, 1908, he went to live at the house of Becky Fidelowsetz, and paid her $5 a week for board and lodging. Soon after, he says, Becky went about saying she was his wife. This he indignantly denied, and now she is suing him for non-support.

Go Together in the Boston American's New

Picture Puzzle Contest

$4,000 in Cash Prizes — First Prize $1,000

Open to All. No Book to Buy. Start Now.

There could be no better time to get interested in the Boston American's new Picture Puzzle Contest than RIGHT NOW.

If you are just starting to solve these fascinating puzzle pictures, you need have no fear that you will be at any disadvantage because of having missed the first few pictures.

It is the intention of the Boston American to make this competition, as nearly as possible, wide open to all of its readers and absolutely free of expense and fair and equal to all.

Those just starting will find reprinted in next Sunday's American, Oct. 5th, a complete set of the puzzle pictures which have and will appear up to and including that date.

And you will also find REPRINTED for your benefit a complete list of the names, titles of books and proverbs from which these first 14 pictures have been selected. Next week's answer list will also be printed in next Sunday's American, so that it is imperative that every contestant be equipped with this valuable information.

Here is the plan of the competition. Read carefully and get busy NOW.

Each day for 85 days (commencing Sunday, Sept. 21) the Boston American will print a puzzle picture representing authors and their books, poets, plays, proverbs, battles, universities, inventors, actors, books, cities, buildings and public men and women. $4,000 in cash prizes will be awarded to the 155 competitors who secure the largest number of correct answers according to the rules of the contest which appear each week in the Sunday American.

That's all there's to it except that it costs nothing to take part in this competition—there is no book to buy and no other expense of any kind necessary. Lack of familiarity with the subjects used need bar no one from competing because there will be printed each week in the Sunday American an official list of names or titles, among which will be found the CORRECT answers to the pictures to be used during the week commencing with this Sunday list publication.

There will be no guide book to buy—just refer to this Sunday list each week and you will have all the information necessary.

Remember, you can start solving the puzzle pictures today, tomorrow or any time but, the sooner the better, as it is a most delightful daily diversion which may be made extremely profitable to you.

Glance down the prize list and get busy right now—today, for the big $1,000 cash prize.

Find Prisoner Is Millionaire's Son

Man Arrested in Providence Said to Be Spendthrift.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 1.—Arnold W. Hazard, twenty-seven, now under arrest on the charge of swindling merchants with bad checks, it was learned today, had, a few years ago, inherited a large share of the million-dollar estate of his father, E. L. Hazard, who was the founder of an enormous grocery business at Red Bank, N. J.

The young man went through his estate in a short time and there are more warrants for him in New Jersey on the same kind of charges. On account of the reputation of his father, Hazard had little trouble in cashing checks throughout the East. He was supposed to have been engaged in the automobile business in New York.

Hold Millworker on Charge of Arson

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 1.—John A. C. Shippee, a millworker, today pleaded guilty to setting fire to the Manton Mills when arraigned in the District Court. He was held in $4,000 for the Grand Jury. It is charged that Shippee has made a complete confession. Three other arrests are expected soon.

ROSE PASTOR'S PLAY STOLEN, SAYS SISTER

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Lillian Pastor, sister of Rose Pastor Stokes, declared today that the strongest scene in the new sociological play, "The Guilty Man," has been taken from an incomplete manuscript of a play "Mary," by the wife of the millionaire Socialist, J. G. Phelps Stokes.

"The Guilty Man" is supposed to be in the main a translation from the novel by Francois Coppee. The translator and the writer of the play is Reida Davis. Dr. Frederick H. Robinson, president of the sociological fund of the Medical Review of Reviews, who is backing the production of "The Guilty Man," as previously he assisted "Damaged Goods," denies the charge.

"Early last Summer Dr. Robinson was the guest of my sister at her Summer home, near Stamford, Ct.," explained Lillian Pastor. "The conversation turned upon 'Damaged Goods,' and Dr. Robinson remarked that a greater play was in contemplation, to be produced under the auspices of the same fund.

"My sister spoke of her play, 'Mary,' and finally read the manuscript to Dr. Robinson. He was very much pleased with a certain scene.

"This September Dr. Robinson again called, and when he read the new play, 'The Guilty Man,' there was that very scene. My sister cried out, 'Why, doctor, that is from my play!'

Brookline Girl to Wed Boston Doctor

Helen McKissock, Bride Today of Dr. F. Gorham Brigham.

A wedding of interest to society of Greater Boston, which takes place this afternoon at the Church of the Redeemer, at Chestnut Hill, is that of Miss Helen Greeley McKissock, daughter of William McKissock, Boston consul for the Argentine Republic, of No. 48 Devon street, Brookline, and Dr. F. Gorham Brigham of the Back Bay.

The ceremony is to be performed by the rector, the Rev. Lucian W. Rogers, in the presence of more than six hundred guests, who represent society of Brookline, the Newtons, West Point, Philadelphia and the Back Bay. The bride will have as her only attendant, Miss Katherine Kimball Simon of Germantown, Pa., as maid of honor, and the best man will be Hugh P. Greeley of this city.

Crew Captains at Wellesley Chosen

Miss Dorothy Huggins of New York and Miss Adelaide Rose of Nyack, N. Y., have been elected, respectively captains of the Wellesley junior and sophomore crews. Miss Linda McDonald of Boston is captain of the senior crew.

O'Neill, Tufts '14 President.

The Tufts senior class has elected Carroll C. O'Neill of Allston as the class president. O'Neill held the same position last year.

MISS HELEN G. M'KISSOCK, of Brookline, who weds Dr. F. Gorham Brigham of Back Bay, at Chestnut Hill today.

RESCUE FIVE AT WEST END HOTEL FIRE

John Cronin, his wife and three children were carried down a ladder from the fourth floor and fifty other persons were driven to the street, early today, during a fire which burned from the basement to the roof of the five-story apartment hotel, at No. 100 Myrtle street, West End, and caused a damage estimated at $5,000.

Scaling ladders were used by the firemen for the first time in years, to prevent the members of the family of William C. Stone on the top floor from jumping. Robert Stone, an amateur middle distance runner, discovered the fire and after arousing everybody in the twelve suites sounded an alarm.

The house was filled with smoke. The stairways had become heated and flames were racing up two air shafts when the half dressed women and children fled from their apartments. Those in the basement and lower floor scrambled out windows, while policemen and firemen carried or assisted the others from the house.

Bullet in Heart, No Hole in Coat

Investigate Death of Cargill, Who Asked Alimony.

WORCESTER, Oct. 1.—The State police are investigating the death of Joseph Cargill, who died in the Worcester City Hospital from bullet wounds supposed at the time to have been self-inflicted.

Investigation has revealed the fact that although Cargill was shot through the heart, the bullet did not pass through his coat or vest, and the revolver with which the shooting was supposed to have been done was thrown further than he could have thrown it after shooting himself.

Cargill aroused attention in the State as the first man to sue for alimony when he entered suit against his wife, Emma Kenzie Cargill, for divorce.

Another Harriman at Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 1.—Another son of the late E. H. Harriman, Edward R. Harriman, is at Yale, with the class of 1917, making a continuous appearance of the name at Yale for eight years.

Barber-Houdini Has Close Shave

Great Tank Act Goes Wrong, but He's Saying "Next" Today.

MIDDLEBORO, Oct. 1.—Andrew Volis, after a close shave, has gone back to barbering. His experience as an amateur Houdini was no hair-raising. Probably he hadn't brushed up enough on the act. When the local Elks sought a feature act for their midway, Volis offered his services. He obtained two galvanized cans, filled one with water and got inside, and then had the second one closed over him. He said he would be out in thirty seconds. Two thousand spectators waited in vain. Then the committee sent for a plumber to rip the cans apart. Volis retired just as someone was phoning for a patrolor.

Chicago in Serious Garbage Difficulty

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Two million people in this city today face the problem of disposing of their garbage, through the discontinuance of service by the Chicago Reduction Company, which is dissatisfied with the price of $492,500 offered for their plant by the city. City officials are today in conference over the matter.

9 WILLIAMS NOTES 'RAISED,' SAYS HINGSTON

Nine notes payable to George E. Williams, whose death revealed a dual life in finance and society, and who was Boston representative of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, have been raised, according to Handwriting Expert William E. Hingston, in a statement today.

Through a perfected process of his own, Hingston has been able, he says, to completely restore and photograph the original figures on these notes. The notes may figure in court proceedings, unless agreements can be reached between the makers and the holders.

Payment on five matured policies of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company has been held up, it was learned today, as the result of proceedings in equity. The persons who filed the suits claim that they gave their lives to Williams for personal loans, and that these notes have been raised—some of them to ten times the original figure.

Rescues Husband Kidnaped by Jokers

Bride who Eloped Vanquishes Friends of Lexington Man.

Peeved on not being "let in" on the secret elopement of Lewis F. Armes, formerly of Lexington, and Miss O. Louise Perkins, of Fairhaven, friends of the couple kidnaped the bridegroom, incarcerated him in a Summer cottage at Bay View, and were only frustrated by the bride herself, who secured a high-powered automobile and rescued him after a midnight ride.

When her husband did not return in the evening, Mrs. Armes became worried, but suspecting a practical joke, followed the best clues she could find, and after a search of the Bay View section found her imprisoned husband.

BRITISH THREAT TO MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 1.—The British legation has warned the Mexican government that unless the railroad between here and Vera Cruz is kept open British troops will be landed to patrol the right of way to prevent interference with trains.

This warning resulted today in the transfer of two troop trains filled with federals to guard the line. The road is owned by British capital.

E. E. Fierro, an American and a former conductor on the Mexican National railway, who was arrested on a charge of embezzlement, has been drafted into the army and sent into Sonora to fight the rebels.

Wife Appeals to U. S.

Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affaires of the United States Embassy, has been appealed to by Mrs. Fierro to secure his release if possible.

The newspapers comment favorably upon the bill introduced in the Chamber of Deputies last night providing for postponement of the election. It is in the hands of a committee.

President Huerta is expected to name Emilio Rabasa, a prominent lawyer, foreign minister this evening.

Flee From Rebel Capital.

Terror has gripped Piedras Negras, the provisional capital of the Mexican constitutionalists, with the victorious northward march of the federals and the arrival of hundreds of refugees from the surrounding devastated country.

Obeying the instructions of United States Consul Blocker, American residents of Piedras Negras joined the exodus and about 2,000 refugees crossed the international bridge into Eagle Pass, Texas, many carrying on their backs such of their possessions as they could hurriedly assemble. It might it is expected that 200 will have arrived here.

Consul Blocker's warning to foreigners to quit Piedras Negras immediately was in anticipation of rioting should the constitutionalists be forced to abandon their provisional capital. As the rebel army is being driven northward by the government troops under General Maas the retreating insurgents are setting fire to villages.

United States troops are hurrying to Eagle Pass from San Antonio to reinforce the garrison there. It is understood that with the first attempt to molest the property of foreigners here an ultimatum will be issued.

Hold Switchman for Row on Train

Frederick Crosby Charged with Attempting to Kill J. W. Deady.

Frederick Crosby, thirty-seven, of No. 9 Chester avenue, Somerville, employed as night switchman on the Boston & Maine Railroad, at the Mystic Junction yard, was held in $3,000 till October 8 by Judge Wentworth in the Somerville Court today on the charge of attempting to kill John W. Deady, twenty-seven, of No. 19 Pearl street, South Framingham.

Deady, employed as brakeman by the Boston & Maine Railroad, is at the Somerville Hospital, suffering from stab wounds in the breast and wrist. His condition is not serious.

It is alleged that Crosby, who has an impediment in his speech, was twitted by Deady while on a train from Boston to the Prospect Hill station, Somerville, and that at the latter place, yesterday afternoon, Deady grabbed Crosby by the throat. Crosby it is claimed, defended himself with a self-opening pocket knife.

EX-KING MANUEL OF PORTUGAL AND HIS BRIDE. All Europe is puzzled over her mysterious illness and the apparently well founded report that the royal romance has been shattered. In this photograph the ex-king and his wife are shown on their wedding day—three weeks ago. The couple are standing outside the bride's castle in Hohenzollern receiving wedding gifts from the village peasants.

HEAR MANUEL'S BRIDE WILL NOW GO INTO EXILE

LONDON, Oct. 1.—All Europe has become deeply interested in the question, "Why should King Manuel's bride determine to leave him within a month after the marriage which, by a political revolution, would place her upon the throne of Portugal?"

The answer is difficult. All the London newspapers publish prominently this dispatch from Berlin, which perhaps is most intensely interested, for the "Queen," a princess of Hohenzollern, is in a Munich hospital:

"In regard to persistent rumors which have been circulated, a telegram from Munich states that the report that Donna Augusta Victoria will not return to King Manuel, although not confirmed, cannot in the circumstances be dismissed.

"According to the same dispatch the illness of the Queen is slight and not a dangerous affection. There is no confirmation of the statement published in Paris that Her Majesty is cured and about to return to Sigmaringen, the residence of her father, Prince William of Hohenzollern."

"Is Seriously Ill."

"The Queen is seriously ill," wires the Berlin correspondent of the Daily Express.

"The stories that the Queen has left the private hospital in Munich are untrue. She is still there, undergoing extremely strict treatment prescribed by Professor Von Romberg, the celebrated specialist.

"The astonishing rumors in Berlin seem to have little definite basis but it is remarkable that until now she never has been ill for a day since her birth.

"She was born in August, 1890."

According to the Standard:

"The Queen's illness was caused by intestinal bacteria which affected the right renal cavity in sympathy," while the same paper says: "Professor Von Romberg declares, 'There is a reasonable prospect of restoration to health within a definite time.'"

Secrecy Ordered.

The usually well informed Berlin correspondent of the Daily Mail, after giving the bulletin handed last night by Professor Von Romberg and two other specialists, says:

"Officers of Prince William of Hohenzollern's household, appear to be under strictest orders to say nothing. The only positive information is that the Queen will return for an indefinite period to her father's castle, as soon as the Munich treatment is ended."

The Vienna correspondent of the same newspaper wires:

"I learn from persons connected with the court that the disease from which King Manuel's bride is suffering will require several weeks for a complete cure, after which she will return to her father's palace.

"There she will stay until her former health is entirely restored, and then plans for the future will be discussed. The possibility of anything beyond a nominal reconciliation between the royal pair is not credited here."

GREENWOOD ESTATE GOES TO CHARITY

Many Baptist church and charitable organizations are benefited under the will of Eliza M. Greenwood, probated in the East Cambridge Probate Court today. Miss Greenwood lived at Wakefield and killed herself by gas September 23.

The value of the estate is given as $35,000, and with the exception of $5,000 bequeathed to Emma B. Harwood, who lived with the testatrix for many years, all of it goes to charity.

The Greenwood home at No. 10 Lafayette street, Wakefield, she leaves to the First Baptist Church of Wakefield to be used as a parsonage or as an "open house" for the purposes of the church.

She also leaves $100 to the messenger corps of the church; $200 to the Wakefield Home for Aged Women; $1,000 to the Wakefield Y. M. C. A.; $1,000 to Colby Academy, New London, where the testatrix was formerly a teacher; $1,000 to the First Baptist Church of Bakersfield, Cal., for an organ and $1,000 to the American Baptist Home Missionary Society to found a scholarship in the Richmond Theological Society. She gives $1,000 each to the American Baptist Home Missionary Society, American Baptist Missionary Union and the Woman's American Baptist Home Missionary Society. She gives $500 each to the American Baptist Publication Society, Massachusetts Baptist Missionary Society, American Bible Society of New York and the Boston Baptist City Missionary Society.

The residue of the estate is also divided among these seven charities.

"Insane" Women to Bring New Petition

Mother and Daughter Returned to Westboro Will Sue Again.

A new petition to effect the release of Mrs. Julia McColliffe and her daughter, Julia Isabella McColliffe, both of Malden, from the State Hospital for the Insane at Westboro, will be offered soon. Judge Loring, who heard their petition for a writ of habeas corpus, decided that they had not shown cause which would warrant him in granting a hearing by a jury as to their sanity.

Dr. H. M. Colburn, of No. 103 Mt. Vernon street, examined Mrs. McColliffe and her daughter in the corridor. He said: "I should consider Miss McColliffe sane. I asked her questions to discover any evidence of delusions, and questions to measure her mental powers.

"I thought Mrs. McColliffe showed evidences of being fairly sane, but of having had delusions."

Seventy Strike in Roxbury Factory

Seventy men employed in the polishing and forge departments of the Trimont Manufacturing Company, Roxbury, struck today because their working hours had been changed from ten hours for five days and a Saturday half-holiday to a straight nine-hour day for six days a week. The greater number of the strikers are piece-workers. No reduction of pay was contemplated for the day workers, although the new schedule reduced their work week one hour.

MAN IS HELD, GRILL WIFE OF DEATH VICTIM

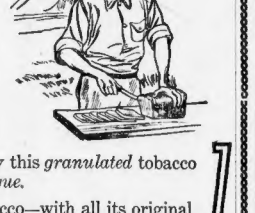
FREEDOM, N. H., Oct. 1.—Sensational developments are expected by the authorities in their efforts to solve the mysterious murder of Edwin A. Shackford, a prosperous farmer, shot through the head while he was asleep in bed, and robbed of $80.

Ben Bean, who is under arrest on suspicion of having slain Shackford, at whose house he lived some time, and Mrs. Shackford, who maintains her husband was shot by two midnight robbers who first chloroformed her, will each undergo a gruelling examination, which, the police say, will go far towards clearing away the mystery, which was increased when physicians declared Shackford had been slain long before they saw his body.

Mrs. Shackford's story, as told to neighbors, and later to the authorities, is as follows:

"I was asleep in a room with my four children, the oldest eight years and the youngest six months, when two masked men entered. They covered my mouth to stifle my cries for help. A few seconds later I heard what seemed the distant report of a revolver. Then I lost consciousness. Two hours later, when I revived, I went to my husband's room, and found he had been slain."

If You Wanted to Keep a Loaf of Bread—You Wouldn't Cut it in Slices.



The moisture of the bread would evaporate, leaving it dry and hard.

It's the same with Tobacco, some manufacturers chop the "plug" into slices, flakes or crumbs. Naturally this granulated tobacco gets dry—that's why it bites your tongue.

If you want to smoke real tobacco—with all its original flavor, sweetness and fragrance—buy Master Workman Plug Tobacco. All the goodness of the moist leaf is squeezed into the plug and protected from the drying air by a natural leaf wrapper.

That's why Master Workman Tobacco keeps fresh and smokes cool. It can't bite your tongue. Just whittle off a fresh pipe load. You'll find it the coolest, sweetest, most fragrant smoke you ever had—Buy a plug today.

65,000 ATTEND BIG BROCKTON FAIR TODAY

Sixty-five thousand saw the bay gelding T. C. S. win the 2:25 pace in straight heats at the Brockton Fair today. The attendance was 5,000 larger than on the corresponding day of last year.

Miss Katherine Elkins, the society belle of Washington, was one of the star attractions at the horse show competitions, in which she entered seventy blooded horses. Alfred G. Vanderbilt and Reginald C. Vanderbilt also attracted considerable notice in these events.

This is New England day at the big fair, and a large number of city and town officials were present in the record-breaking crowd. More than 4,000 automobiles also were registered on the grounds—the greatest second-day turnout of autos ever seen here.

The Brockton police today instituted a vigorous search for two alleged yeggs, who attempted to loot the tent of William Collins on the Midway last night and were driven off by Harry Shannon of Oswego, N. Y. Shannon fired ten shots at the thieves, but did not hit them in either instance, although one of the bullets narrowly missed a woman bystander.

The result of the first race follows:

Four Days' Battle; Eleven Are Killed

Five of Santo Domingo's Dead Were Watching from Sidelines.

SANTO DOMINGO, Oct. 1.—Details of the four days' battle between Dominican revolutionists and federal troops at Samana Bay were received here today. Eleven persons were killed in the battle, five if these non-combatants who were watching the engagement from neighboring houses. The U. S. Cruiser Des Moines arrived at Samana Bay and put an end to the fighting.

The U. S. minister says that the United States will not allow any more revolutions in Santo Domingo as long as President Wilson remains in office.

Invents Gas Cure for Consumption

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Claims of William J. Knox, regarding the beneficial effect of a gas he has discovered for the treatment of consumption and other maladies, are being tested. By combining ozone with pinine, the essence of turpentine, a gas is made which creates an artificial atmospheric condition that, it is claimed, will restore vital qualities to the blood cell as a germicide. It is called terpezone.

More Betting on Mitchel for Mayor

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The Wall Street betting odds on the mayoralty election, as reported by Fred Schumm, are slightly more favorable to Mitchel. One bet of $240 to $200 was made on him. Schumm took the Mitchel end and a curb broker the McCabe side.

Seeks to Abolish Efficiency System

Charlestown navy yard employes hope Representative Deitrick's bill for the abolition of the so-called Taylor efficiency system here and in other Federal workshops, will be adopted.

SMITH THINKS CITY COUNCIL INQUIRY A JOKE

Councilman Earnest E. Smith—Back Bay and Good Government representative in the City Council—declared today that unless methods of intended procedure are changed, he will be missing tomorrow when a committee of the Council sits to investigate charges that Smith made against both the Council and members of the Good Government Association.

Councilman Smith at a meeting of the Council last week charged that the Good Government Association "cracked the whip over members of the Council," that they had helped elect, and that these councilmen, fearing "Gov. Gov" hostility were ready to obstruct the passage of the fire limit ordinance in the interest of contractors.

In the hubbub that followed Councilman Smith's charges, President Kenny broke his gavel and four members of the Council were on their feet at the same time to answer. A committee consisting of Councilman Attridge, Ballantyne and McDonald was appointed to investigate the charges.

Councilman Smith today makes a joke of the matter.

Smith says:

Beginning tomorrow the Boston City Council, by a committee of its own members, is to investigate itself. It is unsafe to be your own lawyer. Still it may be possible to be your own judge. The comical and novel proceeding, if cost used actively to December 31, must supply a splendid lucks for New Year's resolutions. The chairman notified me of this meeting, and I promptly replied it would be a pleasure to confer with them as to what the investigation was to cover. The president punishing his gavel was a most unfortunate occurrence, but personally I should not press an investigation on that point. If the council is at all serious, I shall only attend the hearing of this committee when a stenographer is in attendance and if witnesses are under oath. The chairman tells me that this is not to be done at the first meeting.

200 City Employes Get Increased Pay

Increases in salaries for nearly 200 city employes were approved by Mayor Fitzgerald before he left for the West, and the raises in pay amount to nearly $40,000. The increases average from $50 to $800 a year.

City officials and workmen in the assessing, overseers of the poor, city treasury, sewer, paving, printing, bridge and ferry, and street watering and oiling departments will benefit by the raise.

BRIBE CHARGE MADE AGAINST GOV. SULZER

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The indirect charge of bribery against Governor Sulzer was made before the impeachment court today by John R. Stanchfield, of counsel for the board of managers, when he traced the ascent of Louis A. Sarecky, close friend of Sulzer, from a $400 job to a $4,000 position.

"We propose to present the strongest circumstantial evidence of bribery," said Stanchfield, in replying to an objection to the admission of testimony by counsel for the defence.

John C. Birds-eye, secretary of the State Civil Service Commission, testified regarding the appointment of Sarecky by Governor Sulzer as deportation agent of the State Hospital Commission.

Former Senator Edgar T. Brackett, of counsel for the managers, determinedly questioned John R. Gray of the broker age firm of Fuller & Gray, to learn the present whereabouts of Frederick Colwell, a missing witness.

A CHILD DOESN'T LAUGH AND PLAY

If little stomach is sour, liver torpid and bowels clogged.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once—a teaspoonful today often saves a sick child tomorrow.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that it's little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's tiny stomach and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

3 ARRESTS IN WEST END RIOT

Half a dozen persons were injured and the fruit store of Peter Wolk at No. 24 Spring street was wrecked in a hucksters' riot at Spring and Chambers streets, West End, early today. Patrolman Henry Koerber of the Joy street station was struck over the head with a milk bottle. The reserves were called out.

Three arrests were made, Hyman Bello, twenty-six, of No. 7 Anderson street, was charged with breaking a $80 plate-glass window in the fruit store. His brother Harry was locked up on a charge of profanity and Solomon Blogorsky, twenty-nine, of No. 50 Phillips street, was seized for attempting to rescue the latter from Patrolman Koerber.

The riot was the outgrowth of a difference of long standing between the business men of the vicinity and the hucksters and push cart vendors. The storekeepers protested against the hucksters blocking the two streets with their teams and when Patrolman Koerber told the pedlars to move on, a score or more armed with sticks and stones rushed Wolk's fruit store.

Harry Bellow, the police say, swore at Wolk, whom the hucksters say is responsible for the complaints, and Koerber arrested Bellow. Bello, it is charged, hurled a brick through the plate glass window and others in the crowd rained sticks, stones, rotten eggs and decayed vegetables into the store.

A crowd of nearly 500 persons was attracted to the scene, and Blogorsky attempted to take Harry Bellow away from Patrolman Koerber. In the mixup somebody in the crowd hurled a milk bottle which struck the policeman in the head. Meanwhile, someone sent in a riot call.

She receives $10,000 and the income of the residue of the estate during her life, the fund at her death to go to the Centre Methodist Episcopal Church of Malden in trust, to use the income for the benefit of the poor. Among the other bequests are $500 each to the Foreign Missionary Society and the Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Church and to the Malden Old People's Home.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel dull ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

COLDWELL GIRL WRITES FRIEND EXPLAINING ALL

Miss H. Elta Coldwell, the assistant at the Brookline Public Library, who has been strangely missing for the past four weeks, is alive and well, and gives as her reason for her mysterious disappearance simply that she was unhappy in her work and "wanted a change."

This became known today, through a statement made to the AMERICAN by Dr. Frances M. Morris of Beacon street —Miss Coldwell's physician. It is the first authentic word which has come to clear up the mystery of why Miss Coldwell left home.

Dr. Morris said she knew positively that Miss Coldwell is at present employed at other than library work, and denied that there was a man in the case. However, she refused to reveal the missing girl's whereabouts.

Statement by Girl's Friend.

Dr. Morris said she is the only person who knows where Miss Coldwell is. The physician's statement is taken by Miss Coldwell's friends as equivalent to a statement from the missing girl herself. Said Dr. Morris:

Miss Coldwell went away because she wanted a change of work. I do not blame her for going as her surroundings were not congenial and she was unhappy.

At her own request I have promised her that I would not tell anyone where she is—not even her own relatives. Nobody knows anything about her except myself. She is alive and well and is now employed at a different kind of work.

The nature of this work I must refuse to reveal. Of course, it was foolish for the girl to go away in the way she did, but now that she is gone it is better that no one know anything about it. As her physician I can say positively that there was no man in the case and I know the girl was not in trouble of any kind. I do not care to talk about it any further and I cannot say whether I have heard from her since she left.

"No Direct Word from Her."

That relatives of the missing girl have received no direct word from her was stated by Miss Mary Coldwell of Weston, the girl's second cousin. The Weston relative said:

I would like to know where Elta is as much as anyone. If I knew I would only be too glad to tell you. We are all worried about her. Friends of Elta have employed a private detective for the last few weeks, but he has been unable to locate her.

Her mother is in a sanitorium in Palmer, Mass., and she has an uncle, Frank Coldwell, at Bedford. Her oldest sister, Blanche, works in a jewelry factory at Attleboro. Elta's other relatives live at Newtonville, Nova Scotia, and it would not surprise me if she was stopping with them there. It would be a great relief to us if someone would find her.

This talk about her being discouraged with her work is all nonsense. She had worked at the Brookline Town Library for about three years and liked her work ever so much. She called on us frequently and was always jolly enough while here. She must have some good reason for going away.

Wellesley Girls Hard at the Oars

Four Rowing Teams Training for Autumn Race.

With matriculation out of the way, Wellesley girls have taken up the great college sport—rowing—and Lake Waban these days is streaked by the flashing shells.

Helma Frost of Meriden, Ct., a senior, is head of rowing, and the following class captains have been named:

1914, Linda Macdonald of Roxbury.
1915, Dorothy Huggins of New York.
1916, Adelaide Ross of Nyack, N. Y.

The 1915 crew holds the college record for speed over the 280-yard course. The other two crews are laying stress on technique. The three crews, with a fourth from the physical culture department, will hold a competition at the end of October.

Frankiin Fette of Dartmouth and Columbia, is chief rowing coach.

King's Play Causes Riot In Montenegro

CETTINJE, Montenegro, Oct. 1—Riotous scenes almost culminating in the lynching of the actors who representated Turks, marked the first performance last night of King Nicholas's play, "The Siege of Scutari." When an actor began to describe the assault on Tarabosch, several veterans arose and denounced him as a liar.

POCKET-STOCKING FASHIONS FIRST AID TO SLIT-SKIRTED

Two views of the pocket stocking, the latest ingenious invention for the ladies to safeguard their cash.

Once upon a time any lady who didn't feel safe in carrying more than $1.22 in her purse solved the difficulty by putting the other bills in the well known Lisle National Bank, but, alas! the old girl has changed all that. Hosiery as a safety vault is now an "open secret."

And now what is a lady to do?

Some of the department stores have the answer.

The pocket stocking.

Any lady with the surplus she may make use of the new device and have no fear, for even the shrewdest of silk sharks that a lady may chance to meet would not expose—well, it wouldn't expose the pocket that these new pocketed stockings have.

These pockets are made in the upper part of the stockings just below the upper hem, and the upper hem is secure, it's safe. The pockets are just large enough for folded bills, and as many of them as any lady ought to be carrying about with her.

Manipulation!

Simple. In fact, far more simple than any description of the manipulation process. The lady in the picture tells you how.

Queen Quality at the Hovey Store

Summer Street Firm Distributing Agents for Shoe.

One of the most interesting bits of department store news of the Autumn season is contained in the announcement that C. F. Hovey & Co. will be hereafter the distributing agents in Boston of the Queen Quality shoe.

Arrangements have just been completed whereby the Thomas G. Plant Company, the manufacturers, have agreed to furnish this line of women's footwear to the Summer street firm exclusively and to no other retail concern in the city.

The decision on the part of C. F. Hovey & Co. to take this action was made after the most thorough examination of the methods of manufacture and of the value of the finished output. Representatives visited the great Plant factory in Jamaica Plain, studied the processes in detail and compared the shoes made there with those offered by manufacturers all over the country.

Extensive alterations in the shoe department of the Hovey store have made it one of the most attractive departments in Boston.

PLACE OSBORNE IN "AWKWARD" PRISON SQUAD

AUBURN, Me., Oct. 1.—Thomas Mott Osborne, alias "Tommy Brown," now doing a voluntary term in Auburn Prison to study the prison from the inside, as head of the State Prison Reform Commission, may receive punishment before he leaves the institution. At mess he walked back across the room and a keeper standing nearby ordered him on the shoulder and in personal parlance said:

"Get that out."

Yes, sir," declared the unfortunate inmate as he hurried to the rear and removed his cud. The infraction was not pressed, no time when he got out of line in the exercise walk he was taken up and placed in with the "awkward squad and got a "call."

Such trifling infractions may cause him to be "mark marked," and he may get a "ringer," as the prisoners call the mark made on the cuticle of a cell which indicates that the inmate is marked for punishment. There are rumors that "Tommy" will find himself elated for a session with the "I. N."

This if you may know that "Tommy Brown," known in the cultured circles of Auburn and elsewhere as Thomas Mott Osborne, millionaire philanthropist, lecturer on music and arch enemy of "Boss" Murphy of Tammany Hall, will receive a genuine dose of discipline as also inflicted by the State of New York in its quest for criminal institutions.

Today he looked in with a clear record so far as the punishment books go, but it seems questionable whether the record will remain blank. Any further reading will surely bring punishment of some sort. At any rate, the State Prison Reform Commission will have some interesting material when it goes to work to suggest legislation for the action of the Legislature next Winter.

On Honeymoon in the Adirondacks

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Garrett Were Wed in North Cambridge.

Mr. and Mrs. James Ernest Garrett, who were married last evening in the United Universalist Church, North Cambridge, left today on an extended honeymoon the Adirondacks. Mrs. Garrett was formerly Miss Flora Isabel Ganong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank N. Ganong, of No. 18 Orchard street, North Cambridge. Mr. Garrett is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, class of 1911, and is a practicing civil engineer in Hartford, Ct., where they will live.

The bride wore white satin charmeuse with princess lace trimmings, and her veil was fastened with orange blossoms. She carried a shower of bridesmaids. Miss Louise Dana Hall of Cambridge was maid of honor and Miss Elsie Garratt and Miss Ida Jacques were the bridesmaids. Winslow Garratt of Somerville was best man.

PROSPERITY TOO MUCH FOR HUB GIRL RUNAWAY

Mary Powell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Powell of No. 145 Portland street, Cambridge, who disappeared from the latter part of July, taking her clothes with her, is coming home again after an amusing set of adventures in New York where, a fifteen-year-old girl, she tried to make her way.

Mary, it seems, had a desire to join a moving picture company. Once before she ran away, but was found in New York and returned to her parents. This time she was more successful in her quest. Half an prospering been told soon for her she would step back into a theatrical troupe in the far West earning $14 a week and salaries.

When she reached New York, Mary took a position at four dollars a week and a furnished room in West Twenty-eighth street. Her position was in a waist factory and wasn't "satisfactory" for Mary. So she answered an advertisement and secured a position in a "Peter Pan" ballet. All she had to do was to sit in a "hotness" while two stage hands swung her in company with a number of other little girls, out over the audience. Mary liked the swing also the fourteen dollars she got every Saturday night.

But the $14 proved to be too much for her own good, and she ate so much after starving herself on the $4 a week she previously earned, that she soon began to take on weight. Then the stage hands found they had too hard work swinging her and the ballet master told her so.

Mary was back to $4 in a perfumery store, but the wages were too small and she "struck," the police say, her landlady's gold watch.

For that she appeared before court and was turned over to the Children's Society, which decided that Mary had better go home.

Hyomei is nature's true remedy for catarrh. There is no stomach dosing—you breathe it.

When using this treatment, you breathe healing balsams and effectively reach the most remote air cells of the throat, nose and lungs. The catarrhal germs are destroyed—quick and sure relief results.

Hyomei often restores health to chronic cases that had given up all hope of recovery, so they complained at the start of the disease when the breath is becoming offensive, and continual sniffling, discharges from the nose, dropping in the throat and frequent sneezing or that choked up feeling begin to make life a burden. At the first symptom of catarrhal trouble, such as crusts in the nose, watery eyes, hawking and morning choking, surely use Hyomei and see how quickly you get relief. All druggists sell it.

The complete outfit, including inhaler and bottle of liquid, costs but $1.00; extra bottles of liquid, if later needed, 50 cents. Hyomei is sold under guarantee to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction.

I NOW OPEN TO YOU

Wholesale Furniture Stocks

On Easy Payments

—H. B. Nickerson

I believe I have accomplished what no other man in America has ever been able to do heretofore.

I have arranged to open the doors of Boston's big Wholesale Furniture houses to you so that you can buy whatever you wish, one piece or an entire outfit, and pay for it on easy time payments or cash, whatever suits you best.

Just come down here into the heart of the wholesale furniture district at 90 Canal street. My offices are on the 2nd floor.

Let's talk it over. I know that I can surprise you, particularly if you have already inquired into prices in the uptown retail cash or time payment furniture stores.

I will take you onto immense floors filled with the best furniture wholesaled to dealers all over New England.

You can choose whatever you wish. Nobody will bother you. I will give you my personal attention, and I can show you how to save a big percentage of the retailer's profit.

Surely my offer is worthy of your consideration! I have already scored a big success in this original plan of mine.

Hundreds of my satisfied customers will tell you that to buy from wholesale stocks makes "a big difference" in the bill.

WHY NOT SAVE THAT DIFFERENCE YOURSELF?

JOHN M'GRAW IS THE MOST ADMIRED AND MOST ABUSED MAN IN BASEBALL

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

INDICATIONS ARE THAT HARVARD WILL PLAY THE WAITING GAME THIS YEAR

M'Graw an Able and Aggressive Leader

Most Admired and Most Abused Man in Baseball—Mack His Only Rival for Honors.

By J. W. M'CONAUGHY.

THE most distinctive and aggressive personality in baseball—this is John J. McGraw, the wonderful leader of the Giants. He has been at one and the same time the most abused and most admired man in the national game.

He has been called a rowdy and a Napoleon in about equal parts. He has been mixed up in more rows than any big league manager—but he has also been mixed up in more pennants. Only Connie Mack has equaled his record of five championships in ten years, and he has one thing on the leader of the Athletics in that he never once brought his little band down to the finish mark in the second division.

MACK IS M'GRAW'S ONLY RIVAL.

Mack is his only rival for the title of the greatest manager in the game, and no two men in the world were ever more widely apart in character and methods than these two. The Old Fox of Philadelphia has been dealt with elsewhere. His system is careful, constructive work, leaving nothing to chance.

McGraw's motto is:

"Take a chance any time and fight all the time."

He believes especially in fighting because he is of the mind of Polonius in not advocating fighting as an end. It is always a means with McGraw. There is method in his mixing. He has been represented as running amuck through baseball for the love of a rough house. Nothing is farther from the truth. When McGraw has a row on the ball field he figures that he is going to win something material at some time as a result.

He Does All the Fighting.

For instance, you never hear of any of the Giants being suspended or fined for battling with the umpires these days. Why? Because McGraw discovered that the magnates meant business in their manifestos against bully-ragging the arbiters, and the chief of the Giants decided that a star on the field was worth six on the bench, recovering from the effects of cooling their minds to an umpire.

"I'll do all of the fighting from now on," he told his warriors. "If any man is benched by an umpire I'll find him myself. Let 'em put me out of the game. I'm not out there playing."

He has carried he pugnacious personality into the offensive tactics of his club. He believes in going at the other team with a rush, taking all necessary chances and playing off their feet. For this reason he demands speed and brains of his men. He can make shift to get along without brains, but he will not have a slow man.

Thinks for His Men.

"It is possible to get good baseball out of a 'bonehead,'" he said once, "if you never expect him to think. Whenever there is any thinking to be done, do it for him, and hand on him with both feet if he tries to do any himself."

By following this system he has so-called made popular heroes out of notoriously slow-witted athletics. He is not there on the coaching line thinking for them. And no is the quickest and most daring thinker in baseball.

It is characteristic of his aggressive mind that he is the only big baseball leader who has no use for the sacrifice hit. There is no doubt that he has lost many ball games by not using it, but there is also no doubt that he has won many a game by discarding it. He follows offensive tactics of the dashing kind. He is all for the hit-and-run and the double steal. He believes in hitters and always has at least a better than average batting club, and his argument is that there is no percentage in getting .300 hitters and ordering them to chuck away an one-in-three chance for a clean hit by advance a man a base at the cost of an out.

Relies on Own Judgment.

He is like Connie Mack in that he relies completely on his own judgment. He is the boss—he gives the orders and takes the blame. He never breaks into print with anything like a criticism of any man on his team, no matter how much to blame any man may be for any disaster. He demands absolute obedience and absolutely loyalty from his men, and he stands by them against all comers all the time and under all circumstances.

It doesn't make any difference if every "fan" and sporting writer on the circuit has turned down his thumbs on a ball player. This is usually a good reason, in McGraw's system, for moving him up a few places in the batting order and making him a regular player in a prominent position. There is scarcely a manager in the country that would have clung to Merkle under the terrible "panning" that unfortunate man was let in for by his fatebefore play at second base. McGraw's answer to the storm of abuse was to make him regular first baseman of the club, a place he has filled with credit.

Keeps Youngsters with Team.

He does not hunt for the long future, after Mack's plan. His system is to get a promising youngster, and, instead of letting him work out his own salvation in a minor league club, he attached him to the Giants.

The youngster's job is to sit around and learn, sometimes for three or four years. Snodgrass and Fletcher are good examples of this system. Fletcher was always a likely-looking fielder. Sent into a club where he was fully joined life club, he might never have been anything more. Now he is one of the best fielding shortstops in the business and a dangerous batter, a place where he showed enough weakness to have been dropped by any other manager.

When McGraw is caught by injuries or a series of unfortunate failures he goes about getting ball players in the same manner that he sets about winning games. When he wants a man he gets him, regardless of cost.

His men are always looking for a chance to sweat by him, and the "fans" around the circuit are equally keen for a chance to sweat at him. So he is a mixer of a drawing card as a strategist.

Betting on Series Remains at Even

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—More Athletic money has made its appearance in the world's series betting in the financial district. The basis of the betting, however, still remains at even, with a large floating supply of Giant money.

Some freak bets were recorded, among which was one of $100 even that the scores of the first game of the series would be odd. There was an offer of $200 to $180 that the team winning the first game would win the series; another offer of $100 even that Philadelphia would have the largest total of runs.

Belmont Refuses $200,000 for Horse

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—"Ha, ha!" says August Belmont, in answer to an offer of $200,000 for one of his horses. The horse was Tracery, his great American thoroughbred, and the offer was made by W. Allison, an Englishman, on behalf of a racing syndicate. Mr. Belmont merely laughed at the offer.

"What Happened to the Red Sox?"

"What is the matter with the Red Sox?" Many answers have been received to this question which was asked the baseball "fans" of New England by the Boston AMERICAN. A number of reasons have been advanced by baseball lovers as to why the Red Sox have failed to show championship form this year.

"TEAM OVER CONFIDENT."

Providence, R. I., Sept. 29, 1913.
Sporting Editor, Boston AMERICAN:
What's the matter with the Red Sox? Overconfidence was the main cause of the champions downfall. Why, Speaker, the world's goody, was one of the many victims.

Jake Stahl did his best, but in the early stages of defeat the Sox were demoralized, hence their present position in the race.

Tom Adams's time to the present writing overconfidence has caused more injuries than all the other causes combined. Gedeon, Nordyke, was overslept through lack of condition.

John L. Sullivan was defeated by Corbett through the same reason, and so on from time immemorial.

The Red Sox have been humbled, but they are now going to the races of 1914 and will be strong contenders together with four others.

Chicago 6 to 1, Boston 5 to 1, Washington 3 to 1, Cleveland 2 to 1, Detroit and New York 15 to 1 each, and St. Louis with zero; you take it.

This is about an even book with only St. Louis coming for me. No one would lay those prices, but they are logical.

Patsy Dougherty deserves a consecrated man's share of what pennant money the confederacy was compelled to hand to the Red Sox. From a New Yorker's point of view.

ASSERTS MEN WERE CONCEITED.

Sporting Editor, Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Since you ask me what the baseball public thinks of the Red Sox or of their downfall, I wish to say my candid opinion of the 1913 season of the former "Speed Boys." Here are what were called:

It was a spectator at one of their games with one of our college teams early in the year, and from the way that the Sox behaved they thought everybody in the stand admirably in Speaker. Coming to the conclusion that they were conceited or not putting in enough perspiration if defeating any team which they might meet. I believe that was the real cause of the poor showing of the Red Sox this year.

Very truly yours,

"A FORMER RED SOX ROOTER."

CHARGES "BONEHEAD" BASEBALL.

Boston, Sept. 30, 1913.
Sporting Editor, Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—What is the matter with the Red Sox? Well, perhaps an opinion from a certain Red Sox "fan" will be of a little light on the question, for, believe me, those are the "fans" who are getting the worst of it. The players are getting paid for playing baseball, and when they "muddle" work, left keen or dead, with a series of games on a level course.

They are also guarantee of applause for good work. Speaker and Hooper will admit this. The writer attended nearly all the games played at Fenway Park last year and this year and in my opinion will say that the Red Sox are playing "dead" ball and poor baseball. Numerous accidents have kept some of the best men out of the game, but all clubs have this trouble, so the Sox from first place to fourth cannot be held to task.

"Bonehead" work on the bases has but many games. Trying to steal third with two outs and in what I have seen Red Sox players try to do.

In the last game of the Philadelphia series Tris Speaker was walked. The next batter, instead of trying to steal to reach the corner of the ball. The result was a rabbit hit and a double play. Three was then two out and a man on third. Duffy Lewis hit a fly ball and the game have scored the man on third but the ball been successful. This happened in two innings and we lost two runs and the game. Another thing that is very bad is the fact that it's easy to steal home on our pitchers.

Why does Carrigan not stop them from stealing? Any one there is a man on third. They do not do it when there is a man on first, for several times have been put this over by a man stealing home.

There are only two players on the team who are often caught asleep at bases. A little good coaching might help. It's discouraging to a team's pitcher to lose games where he holds the opponents to a few hits, but finds he has lost the game by lack of good work by his teammates.

Yours truly,
"CENTRE FIELD FAN."

Sporting Editor, Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—As a loyal fan of the Boston Americans, alias Red Sox, and I am very sorry they have not repeated their leading work of 1912. In going over it carefully, my opinion is that Jake Stahl, the man that outwitted McGraw in the world's series, was the best man for manager. Of course, I don't say Jake Stahl did not get a few notes, and basically the team was minus the gumption of Hooper, Wood, and nearly all the players for that matter, lamented the downfall of that fine baseball machine of 1912.

Yours truly,
ROY S. SHEPARD.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. G. MITCHELL

SPORTING writers all over the country and especially in the big league cities are now engaged in the pleasing pastime of "doping" (using the word in its slang phrase) the Athletics and the Giants, the two baseball teams that will soon meet in the world's series. It is generally believed that the baseball public "eats up" inside slang again this sort of stuff. It is a harmless sort of sport and gives the reader a chance to disagree with the findings of the expert reporters.

But the "dope" usually turns out all wrong. A writer, in an elaborate comparison, will prove that Brown of the Giants has it on Jones of the Athletics in every department of the game—in batting, fielding, base-running and general all-round baseball sense—yet in the world's series Jones will make Brown look like a bush leaguer. A writer will also prove conclusively that Smith, the Giants' pitcher is not in the same class with Green, of the Athletics. When they oppose each other in the big games, however, Mr. Green is batted out of the box in the first inning and Mr. Smith holds his opponents to a few scattered hits. And there you are. "Dope" is no use in a world's series. The men of whom little or nothing is expected turn out to be the stars of the series.

HAP MEYERS, the tall and lanky first-baseman of the Boston Nationals has just purchased an automobile and he and his wife will motor from Boston to San Diego, Cal., in it as soon as Hap is released from his professional duties at the South End grounds. Hap asked the writer of these few words to mention the name of his new car. Can't do it, Hap. This column is next to pure reading matter.

THE recent series between the Pilgrims and the Giants has been a snap for the maps. It was just like "treating up for the world's series" for Messrs Klem and Orth.

NEITHER Barry nor McInnis was with the Mackmen when they left Boston last Saturday. These two members of the team stayed behind "to rest up for the world's series." Barry lives in Worcester and McInnis is a Gloucester boy. They were supposed to put in two afternoons watching the Giants play Stallings' men for the purpose of sizing up their coming opponents. But nothing was seen of them at the old yard. It is possible that they were there, but after taking one look at the odds and ends sent over here by McGraw they probably beat a hasty retreat.

HERE is a little boost for the Robbie, written by John Isenringer of the Philadelphia "North American."

"Little Maranville, the mite of a shortstop, never ceases to attract attention. This chap who is no big-ger than a wasp's elbow defies the laws of gravitation, the laws of physics and the laws of Pennsylvania in guarding the shortstop spot for Boston.

"Harry Davis, Jim Thomas, Carroll Brown and several other members of the Athletic team who were resting in this city last week saw Maranville and grasped at the odd manner in which he catches flies, picks up grounders and takes throws.

"Maranville never seems to look at the ball, but knows by instinct where it is going. In catching a fly he holds his hands close to his stomach and lets it fall into the pocket he has formed.

"It is said that a well-known shortstop, who had seen Maranville perform, thought he would imitate his way of catching a fly ball the next morning in practice. The first time he did it the ball almost punctured a hole in his stomach. He never tried it again.

"With all his freaky way of fielding, Maranville covers an immense amount of ground. He looks like the coming assertion of the National League. He has already arrived and will get better. Maranville is an ideal man to top a batting order, and his defensive and run-getting ability has been a big help toward converting the Bostons from a group of ineffoons to a bunch of real players."

NOTHING doing today in the neighborhood of Walpole street. But lookout for tomorrow. The series for the championship of the second division will then be on. If the Brooklyns do not play today they will come here one full game behind the Bostons. In that case the Brooklyns must win all three games to beat out Bostons for fifth place. If the Brooklyns win two and lose one they will lose fifth place by .0006 points or nine one-thousandths of a point. The figures will be: Boston .4475; Brooklyn .4466.

MAY CALL OFF BIG SERIES IF PLAYERS WRITE

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1.—Chairman Herrmann of the National Baseball Commission declares that the commission would go so far as to call off the World's Series altogether if players who participate in the series refuse to refrain from writing newspaper articles.

When the commission meets in New York next Monday it is likely that the players known to have signed contracts as newspaper writers will be summoned before the commission and told they will be heavily fined if their names appear signed to baseball articles. Then Managers McGraw and Mack will be formally asked to tell the players again of the ruling.

If, after the first game, signed articles by players in the series appear, the Commission may step in and call off the series until the players confine their efforts strictly to playing ball.

"The Commission will enforce the rule prohibiting series players from allowing the use of their names over newspaper articles," said Mr. Herrmann. "And it is probable the series will be called off if the players refuse to live up to the rule. The commission will, however, protect the newspapers that have secured the contracts of players to write articles."

It may be stated, however, that there is not the slightest danger of the series being called off on any protest.

CONNIE MACK WILL NOT STOP HIS PLAYERS FROM WRITING SERIES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, in a statement declared that he would not prevent two of his players, Baker and Collins, from writing special newspaper articles on the World's Series, against which a ruling was recently handed by the National Baseball Commission.

"It seems that the commission is making the ruling entirely too late," said Mr. Mack, "and if any such action is contemplated, the players should have been notified long since." He expressed the opinion that the players would go ahead with their plans without serious opposition.

EDDIE MURPHY GAINS THE DECISION OVER BALDWIN BY CLEVER RING WORK

Harvard Eleven to Play Waiting Game

Present Work Indicates that Kicking Will Be Used Frequently This Season

By SYDE LYNES.

"LET down the curtain, the farce is done," said our old friend Rabelais way back in the dark ages, and so hath Head Coach Haughton spoken over Harvard way. Now in the murky mysterious shadows of the Stadium, with the curtain drawn tight against even the student body, the noble Knights of the Pigskin pursue their endeavors to whip out a team fit to beat the Blue Bulldog to a mere frazzle and stuff his hide for the edification of footballdom for ages to come. There's to be no more fooling for the Harvard squad as the scrimmage today attests, and from this point on the team is learning real football.

Up to this point the eleven has been using the old formations, simple in the extreme, but to perfect those plays that will be sprung against the big elevens, plenty of practice is necessary and for this sort of thing secret work is ordered. Whoever has the nerve to walk boldly up some unnoticed part of the Stadium and boldly secret himself behind some benches to have a spy peep at the Crimson monsters at work, will doubtless be rewarded by being just as boldly marched out of the structure with the hand of one of the Harvard managerial candidates at his shell-like ear, for orders are strict.

STIFF WORKOUT TODAY.

THE work promises to be pretty stiff today, for while the big eleven had a hard workout in the previous scrimmage, there seemed at times to be a lack of that punch of which we hear so much in connection with teams that do things. It could hardly be said that there was a slump, for that does not aptly describe it. Merely the men had not been sufficiently awakened, and the two touchdowns that they were scored against the second team in the twenty minutes' scrimmage were not built of the hard fought variety.

PLAY THE WAITING GAME.

HARVARD is apparently going to be coached to play as much of a waiting game as anything else this year, and a pretty good idea it is. Kick and kick and kick is the play, trusting to the superior punting of the Crimson kicker to finally drive the ball into the enemy's territory and when the catchers have their 30 of the hard tackling of the Harvard ends, the supposition is that supreme fright will cause a fumble. The first touchdown was scored by this process. Hardwick did the kicking and was in first class form, getting his kicks off fast and in excellent form for long distances and with that sidewaay twist which adds an elusiveness to it, not altogether unlike the in-and-out twist which the golf curveing is taken. Did you ever try to catch a pig? Anyone who was finally that one of the round sacks fumbled as, had all figured from the start, and soon recovered the spheroid on twenty yard line. Hardwick and Brickley in three rushes made it first down on the part of the second play that was a little stiffer than usual, six yards off for first down, and in three more rushes Brickley took the ball over, after which Storer kicked the goal. The plays were all another of tackle, the Crimson stiff clinging to that policy which dictates at least semi-open style of play.

HAUGHTON WATCHING BACKS.

COACH HAUGHTON is spending a good deal of time with his backs in the period preceding the regular work of the afternoon, as the backs and ends get down half an hour before the others, in teaching them to receive the ball and then suddenly twist around so as to back through the line. That not only would afford a means of making it hard for the defence to discover the whereabouts of the ball, but it would also aid in intricate formations, for one man could be sent through the line backward as though he had the ball while pigskin, while other backs could be running in other directions, creating a pretty sort of mix-up. Such a play, of course, would not be likely to work more than once or twice against any team except one from Danvers, but it ought to be valuable against any eleven for one or two whacks.

SHOWS POWER IN ATTACK.

ON the second kick off Mahan took the ball and ran it in forty-five yards to midfield. From this point on the varsity line showed a greater power in attack than previously and off the opposing linemen on the various formations in mid-season style, Brickley and Hardwick, with Mahan now and then coming in for a share, slashing off yard after yard at either side of the line for consistent gains. It was not until the ball had been worked down to the fifteen-yard line that the second eleven made a last valiant stand, and Hardwick was given the ball.

On one of his brilliant hurtling dashes he gave an exhibition of the only original greased pig and bedgie the second eleven could get their breath he was over their line for a score. Storer failed to kick the goal. This ended the work.

MILLS IS A POSSIBILITY.

ON the defensive the varsity line held well and with Soucy, who is playing at centre territory, was somewhat eliminated. Mills had his first crack at guard, in the absence of Cowen, and put up a very creditable game. He is rapidly absorbing the ideas of his coaches, and as he is not bothered with any superfluous weight and is a man of rangy build, he begins to look like a very real possibility for the position, although Cowen is a man with more experience.

SUBS MAKE GREAT RUNS.

FORWARD passes were reserved for the subs to try out against the unfortunate second eleven, who about this time took it upon themselves to make our sympathy seem misplaced. Twice during the scrimmage with the varsity subs, the "mourning squad" rushed the ball to within the ten-yard line and then lost it on forward passes, Felton, the brother of the great Samuel, and Temple, one of the second eleven backs, pulling off some spectacular runs, that made certain parties sit up and take notice.

During this latter scrimmage, Freedley made a beautiful pass to Gardiner at end for the subs. Gardiner had a clear field and with no possible tender spot in his heart for the humiliation that might be the lot of the second team should he score, dropped the ball and it was all off.

BRADLEE IS IMPROVING.

BRADLEE ran the varsity during the entire scrimmage, and while he seemed a bit crude, he got his signals off in a much snappier fashion and seemed a great deal more confident of himself. He showed splendid ing off and a few chances at leading the team in real games, he ought to develop into the real end of the year. Incidentally Harry Gardiner, who has been coaching the quarters has left, but L. B. Wigglesworth, quarter on the 1911 team, is expected in several days to take charge. He has been at Phillipines and may have picked up some tricks in both athletics that will come handy in new stunts with the forward pass.

This is a department of the game that thus far the Crimson has been strictly alone. Perhaps it is still too early in the season to branch out on what may be considered not an absolute necessity, but with the latitude now given in the play, the Crimson can well afford to try it out pretty thoroughly later on.

CHOICE FOR BACKFIELD.

UNLESS something unforeseen happens, the Harvard backfield should be composed of Brickley, Mahan, Hardwick and Bradlee. The latter will be at quarter and the other just plain backs. Under the system followed at Cambridge it is impossible to speak of any of the backs as excelling any particular position, as they are merely one, two and three backs. This is for greater simplicity in signals for both quarter and backs and has worked out well in past years. But with these three men in the running as fine a combination will be had as can be assigned, and even in the alternating of the plays, a running fire of attack can be sustained that will keep any set of ends and secondary defense worried to death. In addition to this every one of the three will excel in some department of kicking, so there need be no uneasiness felt on this score.

BLACKBOARD TALKS.

COACH Haughton was not present during the entire work yesterday, as he had to leave before the scrimmage began. He was there to give his blackboard talk at his charges, and later left Lee Leary in charge of the men. Coach Haughton is very particular that no one have a look at his blackboard in the varsity locker room. It is rumored he will spirit away anyone found examining it and keep them secreted in a dark dungeon somewhere in the wilds of Harvard Square until after the Yale game. Capital punishment would not be too severe for such an offense.

Murphy Wins Decision Over Matty Baldwin

South Boston Boy's Cleverness Proves Too Much for Charlestown Boxer in Atlas Bout

By JACK CONWAY.

EDDIE MURPHY is today parading up and down Broadway in dear old South Boston with a broad smile on his face and bowing to all sides. Eddie, or Patrick Splans as he was christened, is a happy youth for he bested Matty Baldwin in their twelve-round bout at the Atlas A. A. last night. By vanquishing the stout-hearted Charlestown boy Murphy annexed the lightweight championship of New England which title has been held by Baldwin since he defeated "Kid" Goodman back in 1906.

And, believe us, it is rather profitable to be a champion in these days of that animal known as the high cost of living. There is Willie Ritchie, for example, who would not box old Rip Van Winkle unless some generous-hearted promoter with more money than brains made a commotion like $15,000.

Murphy and Baldwin put up a great battle last night. There were few idle moments in the entire contest. Matty refused to acknowledge defeat, and when the bell sounded at the end of the twelfth stanza he was in the centre of the ring exchanging punches with Murphy. There are few boxers in the world who are as courageous as the little Bunker Hill "Bearcat."

Murphy boxed every bit as good as he did against either Gilbert Gallant or Joe Eagan. He was as fast as lightning on his feet and his left-hand punch never worked better. This was the blow that caused Baldwin's downfall.

Eddie Boxed Like Champion

The South Boston boxer also used excellent ring generalship and kept cool throughout the contest. Eddie has a habit of getting excited when the milling becomes fast, but he did not last night.

Murphy gave a fine exhibition of blocking while his footwork was superb. He left the ring without a mark, which is a strong argument in support of the statement that boxing is a good sport for a young man who will use his brains as well as his hands.

Baldwin did a great deal of leading throughout the bout. He would rush in close and in this way he scored many solid body punches. Many of Matty's punches, however, were merely slaps. His hands seem to be in poor condition and when a fighter's tools go back on him it is a difficult task for him to retain his position among the leaders in his class.

Baldwin did his best work in the fifth session when he forced the issue although at times he was wild in delivering his blows. The Charlestown favorite also showed to advantage in the last part of the whirl which he displayed some of that fighting ability which caused him to be feared by the great lightweights in the world a few years ago.

Murphy did his best work in the first eight rounds although there were times in the early part of the "go" in which Baldwin forced him to give ground.

Murphy Is After Britton

The decision of Referee Flaherty was a very popular one. Murphy's supporters were elated over his victory, while Baldwin's many friends who saw the bout seemed to realize that Matty had met his master. Some of them argued that a draw would not have been a poor verdict, but almost all of the unbiased "fans" took off their hats to Murphy.

He is now the best "card" in New England. He asserted today that nothing would please him better than a bout with the crafty Jack Britton. Murphy and Britton have already fought twice, Britton scored a knockout in eleven rounds in the first tussle, while the South Boston lad held his own with Britton in the second encounter.

The preliminary bouts were fairly good. Dave Powers of Malden was scheduled to meet "Young" Kenney of Woburn in the semi-final bout of eight rounds. Kenney, however, injured himself while training and Patsy DeLuca was sent in as a pinch hitter. Patsy proved a second Olaf Henriksen, and, although in the opinion of the honorable referee he did not walloop out a victory, he made a fine showing. When the bout ended, the referee declared the "go" a draw.

In the humble opinion of the writer, DeLuca had the best of the fighting. True Powers fought like a champion in the eighth round, but, according to our method of reasoning, a referee should consider eight rounds when he is giving a decision in an eight-round bout and not be carried away when a boxer "flashes" in the last stanza.

Devine Knocked Out

Terry Smalley of Everett knocked out Mickey Devine of Providence in one of the six-round preliminaries. Smalley landed the dream wallop in the final chapter. Up to that time the contest was even and if Smalley had not scored a knockout the referee would have been forced to have called the bout a draw.

Many Shifts Made in Old Eli Eleven

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 1.—Significant shifts in the Yale football eleven have been made by Head Coach Howard Jones. Captain Kendrum was transferred from centre to guard, Marting being given the scrimmage assignment, Pendleton was moved from right guard out to tackle on the same wing. Ben Avery was deposed at left end, Roberts being given the place.

The revised lineup: Left end, Roberts; left tackle, Talbott; left guard, Cooney, right tackle, Pendleton, right end, Carter; quarterback, Wilcox; left halfback, Carwell; right halfback, Knowles; fullback, Guernsey.

Red Sox and Yankees Double-Header Off

POLO GROUNDS, Oct. 1.—The double header scheduled today between the Boston Red Sox and the Yankees was called off on account of rain. The rain began early this morning and not once did it clear up.

This was the first double header team was especially anxious for this weather to clear sufficiently for a game. The Red Sox leave here tonight for Washington where they wind up the season.

Yale Will Continue the English Stroke

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 1.—The so-called English stroke will be continued by the Yale crew during the next year, and W. Averill Harriman, head coach last season, will again continue in that capacity, assisted by J. O. Rodgers, a former head coach. Mr. Harriman has returned to college to complete his course.

Announcement of the plans for the Fall and Winter practice are expected in a few days, when the crew men are called out.

Maranville Will Not Go on World Tour

Walter Maranville, the clever little shortstop of the Pilgrims, who was spoiled in the Philly series, is able to hobble about again with the aid of a cane. Maranville says he will not go with the Giants on the around the world tour. Mclraw made him the offer, but after considering it he decided not to take the trip.

Return Money to Mail Applicants

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Officials of the New York Club announced they have returned $50,000 to persons who sent the money to buy tickets to the championship games. Under the rules, no mail orders for tickets are to be honored, and would-be purchasers must await their turns at the gates. The applications came from all parts of the country.

Shakeup of Green Strengthens Line

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 1.—Coach Cavanaugh has given the Dartmouth eleven a great shakeup up at the close of the poor showing of the line last Saturday. He has been shifted from the fullback position, which he has played for three years, to right tackle, Paddock has been changed from right tackle to left end. Wallace has been moved out of the backfield to right tackle. Murray is playing at full with Ammond and Currie as halfbacks. With the addition of Whitney and Ames the line has been strengthened greatly. Whitney has played the position before, and is perfectly at home in the line. Ames finds the tackle position difficult. Paddock has a good strong guard and can put he shows a lack of knowledge of the finer points of the work of a tackle. Murray is playing a steady game in his position both on offense and defense.

Papke Up for More.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1.—Billy Papke has been matched to meet Marty Rowan in an eight round bout here on October 12. The men will weigh in at 158 pounds.

Jennings Wishes to Abide by Rules

DETROIT, Oct. 1.—Hughie Jennings, though under contract to write newspaper stories of the world's series games next week, stated today that unless his agreement was approved by the National Commission he would not write.

Jennings has been perplexed over the matter for some time. It has been known by members of the commission that he had signed up for more than a week and he supposed that as he was a member of the commission he could write there was no objection. Recent developments, however, have led him to feel somewhat differently. He says he does not want to antagonize any one of the members of the commission by violating the commission's new rules cover case.

Dillon Christie Matched.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 1.—Jack Dillon, local claimant to the middleweight boxing championship, and Gus Christie of Milwaukee have been matched to ten rounds at Terre Haute, Ind., here October 9 and 10.

TELLS OF THE EFFECTIVE SHOTS USED BY GOLFERS

Written expressly for the Boston American by the open golf champion of the United States.

By FRANCIS OUIMET.

Francis Ouimet.

THERE are a large number of different shots that can be played in golf. They really have to be played because the elements or other works of nature make this a necessity in seeking for the best results.

First of all there is the drive. A slice might be advantageous or even a pull. To obtain the slice, the ball is played off the left foot. This shortens the swing and consequently the hands have a tendency to cut across the ball forcing it out as it were. When the ball strikes the ground on this shot the force is spent and the ball will run but very little.

BEST GOLFERS PLAY SLICE SHOT.

Then there is the slice as played by Vardon, Ray and the other great golfers. This is played off the left foot also, but not so much so as the slice caused by shifting across the ball. The ball is struck from the inside and though not a wide slice it keeps bearing to the right at all times. This shot is a good one to play since it is a safe and effective shot in playing into the wind or approaching the green.

Then comes the "pulled" ball or shot that breaks to the left. This stroke is made by playing the ball off the right foot. In striking the ball the right wrist is turned over slightly. This causes the ball to curve to the left.

It is rather a dangerous shot to play because a number of the championship courses nowadays are trapped in such a manner that the pulled ball is often times badly penalized. It is played by a number of the best professionals as a means of obtaining greater distance.

The ball seems to have an over spin which causes it to run for some way after it first strikes the ground. Of course this is in direct contrast to the slice ball which having a spin sideways tends to stop the ball.

It is very great advantage to be able to play the "slice" and "pull" because oftentimes a tree or some other obstruction presents itself and no stroke need be lost by playing it safe when there is a possible chance for one or the other.

But for all that never play either shot when a straight one may be played with as good results. The straight ball down the middle of the course is always easiest because you have to do in the matter of approaches and second shots.

You have seen the possible descendant of Michael Angelo on some street corner surrounded by plaster of paris statues of Venus, Adonis, The Three Graces and a few grotesque ideas of his own, haven't you?

His ability consists of marring the masterpieces of others.

So it is with many men who design clothing for men. They lack the genius for conception.

They have the ability (?) to distort and make grotesque the models of the masters whom they try to copy.

Go you to the merchant who concerns himself with merchandise that expresses individuality and originality—to the merchant who offers, at a reasonable price (say $25.00) a ready-for-service suit or overcoat that defines the distinctiveness which a master-designer alone can conceive and a master-tailorman alone can express. Such garments are SOUTHWICK Suits and Overcoats for men and young men.

THE RING OF DIAMONDS

BY LOUIS TRACY

A THRILLING STORY OF A MODERN MONTE CRISTO

You Can Begin This Great Story Today by Reading This First

PHILIP ANSON is a boy of fifteen, of fine education and good breeding, but an orphan and miserably poor.

The story opens with the death of his mother.

Rich relatives have deserted the family in their hour of need, and when his mother's death comes Philip is in despair. He looks over his mother's letters and finds that he is related to Sir Philip Morland. A few days later a terrific thunderstorm breaks over London. At the height of the storm a flash of lightning scares a team attached to a coach standing in front of a West End mansion. Philip, who has become a newsboy, rescues a girl from the carriage just before it rushes over. A man with the girl trips over Philip in his excitement. He cuffs the boy and calls a policeman. The girl pleads for Philip, and he is allowed to go after learning that the man was Lord Vanstone. Philip then determines to commit suicide. He borrows a piece of rope from O'Brien, a ship chandler, and goes to his miserable dwelling in Johnson's Mews.

Just as he is about to hang himself a meteor flashes by the window and crashes into the flagstones in the yard. The boy takes this as a sign from Heaven not to kill himself. He then goes to the yard to look at the meteor. Philip picks up several curious-looking bits of the meteor and shows them to O'Brien. The latter advises him to take them to a jeweller's. He visits a Mr. Wilson, who tells him that the pieces are meteoric diamonds worth an immense fortune. Wilson sends him to a diamond dealer named Isaacstein. Philip is hungry, but has no money, and on his way to the dealer's thinks how hard it is that he, with all these diamonds in his pocket, cannot even buy a meal. He goes into a restaurant and asks the proprietor to trust him for a meal. The man refuses, but Mr. Judd, a grocer, offers to pay the bill. Philip eats his fill and promises to reward the grocer later. He tells Isaacstein Mr. Wilson sent him. At the police station he gives his name as Philip Morland. Isaacstein admits the diamonds could not have been stolen as no such collection of stones ever existed. He is then taken into court. Isaacstein tells the judge that the diamonds are worth fifty thousand pounds ($250,000).

Now Read On

Copyright, 1906, by Edward J. Clode.

IT last the magistrate seemed to make up his mind to a definite course of action.

"There is only one person present," he said, "who can throw light on this extraordinary case, and that is the boy himself."

He looked at Philip, and all eyes quickly turned toward the thin, ragged figure standing upright against the rail that shut him off from the well of the court. The professional people present noted that the magistrate did not allude to the strange-looking youth as "the prisoner."

What was going to happen? Was this destitute urchin going to leave the court with diamonds in his pocket worth fifty thousand pounds? Oddly enough, no one paid heed to Philip's boast that he owned far more than that amount. It was not he but his packet of diamonds that evoked wonder. And had not Isaacstein, the great merchant and expert, apprised them openly? Was it possible that those dirty-white pebbles could be endowed with such potentiality? Fifty thousand pounds! There were men in the room, and not confined to the unwashed, whose palates dried and tongues swelled at the notion.

ON THE MONDAY FOLLOWING THE REMAND, A LADY SAT AT BREAKFAST IN A SELECT WEST END HOTEL, AND LANGUIDLY PERUSED THE RECORD OF THE CASE UNTIL HER EYE CAUGHT THE WORDS OF "PHILIP MORLAND." THEN HER AIR OF DELICATE HAUTEUR VANISHED, AND SHE LEFT HER BREAKFAST UNTOUCHED UNTIL WITH HAWKLIKE CURVING OF THE NECK AND NERVOUS CLUTCHING OF HANDS, SHE HAD READ EVERY LINE OF THE POLICE COURT ROMANCE.

SHE WAS A TALL, THIN, ARISTOCRATIC LOOKING WOMAN, WITH EYES SET TOO CLOSELY TOGETHER, A CURVED NOSE, LIKE THE BEAK OF A BIRD OF PREY, AND HANDS COVERED WITH A LEATHERY SKIN, SUGGESTING TALONS.

HER ATTIRE AND POSE WERE ELEGANT, BUT SHE DID NOT SEEM TO BE A PLEASANT SORT OF PERSON. HER LIPS PARTED IN A VINEGARY SMILE AS SHE READ.

SHE EVIDENTLY DID NOT BELIEVE ONE WORD OF THE NEWSPAPER REPORT IN SO FAR AS THE DIAMONDS WERE CONCERNED.

A Game of Hazard

PHILIP knew that a fresh ordeal was at hand. How could he preserve his secret—how hope to prevail against the majesty of British law as personified by the serene authority of a man whose penetrating glance now rested on him? His was a sour and stubborn nature, though hardly molded as yet in rigid lines. He threw back his head and tightened his lips. He would cling to his anonymity to the bitter end, no matter what the cost. But he would not lie. Never again would he condescend to adopt a subterfuge.

"Philip Morland," began the magistrate.

"My name is not Philip Morland," interrupted the boy.

"Then what is your name?"

"I will not tell you, sir. I mean no disrespect, but the fact that I am treated as a criminal merely because I wish to dispose of my property warns me of what I may expect if I state publicly who I am and where I live."

For the first time the magistrate heard the correct and well-modulated flow of Philip's speech. If anything, it made more dense the mist through which he was trying to grope his way.

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"I mean that if I state who I am, I will be robbed and swindled by all with whom I come in contact. I have starved, I have been beaten, for trying to earn a living. I was struck last night for saving a girl's life. I was arrested and dragged through the streets, handcuffed, this morning, because I went openly to a dealer to sell a portion—to sell some of my diamonds. I will take no more risks. You may imprison me, but you cannot force me to speak. If you are a fair man, you will give me back my diamonds and let me go free."

This outburst partly electrified the court. Philip could not have adopted a more domineering tone were he the Governor of the Bank of England charged with passing a counterfeit half-crown. The magistrate was as surprised as any.

"I do not wish to argue with you," he said, quietly; "nor do I expect you to commit yourself in any way. But you must surely see that for a poverty-stricken boy to be found in possession of gems of great marketable value is a circumstance that demands inquiry, however honest and—er—well bred you may be."

"The only witness against me has said that the diamonds could not have been stolen," cried Philip, now thoroughly aroused, and ready for any war of wits.

"Quite true. The inference is that you have discovered a meteoric deposit of diamonds."

"I have. Some—not all—are before you."

A tremor shook the court. Isaacstein swallowed something, and his head sank more deeply below his shoulders.

"Then I take it that you will not inform me of the locality of this deposit?"

"Yes."

"And you think that by disclosing your name and address you will reveal that locality?"

Philip grew red.

"Is it fair," he said, with a curious sickness in his tone, "that a man of your age should use his position and knowledge to try and trip a boy who is brought before you on a false charge."

ONE ON THE COURT

It was the magistrate's turn to look slightly confused. There was some asperity in his reply.

"I am not endeavoring to trip you, but rather to help you to free yourself from a difficult position. However, do I understand that you refuse to answer any questions?"

"I do." The young voice rang through the building with an amazing fierceness.

Mr. Abingdon bent over the big book in front of him and scribbled something.

"Remanded for a week," he muttered.

"Downstairs," growled the court jailer, and Philip disappeared from sight. The magistrate was left gazing at the packet of diamonds, and he called Isaacstein, the clerk of the court, and two police inspectors into his private office for consultation.

Meanwhile London was placarded with Philip's adventures that Saturday evening. Contents bills bawled in their blackest and biggest type. Newsvendors bawled themselves hoarse over this latest sensation. Journalistic ferrets combined theory and imagination in the effort to spin out more "copy." Scotland Yard set its keenest detectives at work to reveal the secret of Philip's identity, while Isaacstein, acting on the magistrate's instructions, wrote to every possible source of information in the effort to obtain some clew as to recent meteoric showers.

No one thought of connecting the great storm with the "Diamond Mystery." Meteors usually fall from a clear sky and are in no way affected by atmospheric disturbances, their normal habitat being far beyond the influence of the earth's envelope of air.

And so the hunt for the meteor commenced, and was kept up with zest for many days. "Have you found it?" became the stock question of the humorist, and might be addressed with impunity to any stranger, particularly if the stranger were a nice looking girl. No one answered "What?" because of their weird replies that were forthcoming.

The police failed utterly in their efforts to discover Philip's identity or residence. Johnson's Mews, Mile End Road, might as well be in Timbuctoo for all the relation it bore to Lodgate Hill or Hatton Garden. An East End policeman might have recognized Philip had he seen him, but the official description of his clothing and personal appearance applied to thousands of hobbledehoys in every district in London.

Two persons among the six millions of the metropolis alone possessed the knowledge that would have led the inquirers along the right track. The doctor who attended Mrs. Anson in her last illness, had he read the newspaper comments on the boy's speech and manner-isms, might have seen the coincidence supplied by the Christian name, and thus been led to make some further investigation. But his hands were full of trouble on his own account. A dispenser mixed a prescription wrongly, and dosed a patient with half an ounce of arsenic instead of half an ounce of cream of tartar. The subsequent inquest gave the doctor enough to do, and the first paper he had leisure to peruse contained a bare reference to the "Diamond Mystery" as revealing no further developments. He passed the paragraph unread.

O'BRIEN IN TROUBLE

The remaining uncertain element centered in old O'Brien, the pensioner. Now it chanced that the treasury had discovered that by a clerical mistake in a warrant, the old man had been drawing two pence a day in excess of his rightful pension for thirty-three years. Some humorist in Whitehall thereupon sent him a demand for one hundred and three pounds and fifteen shillings, and the member of the Whitechapel Division was compelled to adopt stern tactics in the House before the matter was adjusted, and O'Brien was allowed to receive the reduced quarterly stipend then due. During that awful crisis the poor, old fellow hardly ate or slept. Even when it had ended, the notion remained firmly fixed in his mind that the murderin' government had seized him of a hundred gowden sovereigns, and more."

As for newspapers, the only item he read during many days was the question addressed by his "minister" to the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the brief reply thereto, both of which were fixed beforehand by mutual arrangement.

In one instance the name given and afterward repudiated by the boy did attract some attention. On the Monday following the remand, a lady sat at breakfast in a select West End hotel and languidly perused the record of the case until her eye caught the words of "Philip Morland." Then her air of delicate hauteur vanished, and she left her breakfast untouched until, with hawklike curving of neck and nervous clutching of hands, she had read every line of the police court romance. She was a tall, thin, aristocratic looking woman, with eyes set too closely together, a curved nose, like the beak of a bird of prey, and hands covered with a leathery skin suggesting talons. Her attire and pose were elegant, but she did not seem to be a pleasant sort of person. Her lips parted in a vinegary smile as she read. She evidently did not believe one word of the newspaper report in so far as the diamonds were concerned.

"AT" came from his lips at this, and he gave me an unfathomable look. Did he doubt me? Did any suspicions such as you have felt cause his mind? I do not think so; if I ever came—and from some hints my husband has given me concerning his after conduct, I fear that it ultimately did—it was after he had had time to think of the whole matter; otherwise he could scarcely have entered into the situation as he did, or offered me so freely his aid in the awful emergency in which I found myself.

"For, with but the shortest moment given to grief he turned upon me and asked if my secret was still safe, and when I told him it was, he said, sneeringly:

"'You are in a frightful position. I see that. You have married Dr. Cameron and are expecting his presence every moment at the door. If she is seen, you are lost, for you could not bear a comparison with her, point for point, however perfectly you carry off her appearance when alone. What then is to be done? I can see but two alternatives. Either acknowledge the whole and release the doctor—a course I certainly should advise—or you must trust me with this body to dispose of as I think fit.'

"'I cannot tell Dr. Cameron,' was my answer. 'I have married him and I mean to live with him. He would wish it if he knew. He loves me and there is no love for you. I dare go one to my action and I save everybody from deep and lasting pain.'

"His lip stern as iron, just quivered for a moment, as if he denied this last assertion, but he said:

"'I will help.'

"'Listen, then; I will help you, Mildred, because, hard-hearted as I am, I pity you. And rids is how I propose to do it. When you are gone—you are going on a wedding journey, I presume—'

"I nodded.

"'I will carry Genevieve out, secretly if I can, openly if I must, and putting her in my nearest drive her to Mrs. Olney's house. My driver is with me but I will double him, and by taking every precaution possible to avoid observation, I may succeed in getting away from the house unnoticed. If I do, I will say she took poison on the route; if I do not, that she is ill, and that I, being a physician and her engaged husband, am taking her home. In either case I shall declare her to be Mildred Farley, and to this story I shall cling till you yourself inform me that your husband knows the truth and that it is useless to persist in the lie any longer. Do you understand me, Mildred?'

"I signified that I did, and he went on:

"'I think I can manage it so that you will be saved from all inquiries. If I do not, remember that you are Genevieve Grenvers, and play your part well. Now where is the bottle from which she took the acid?'

"I showed him, and he picked it up and put it in his pocket. He had hardly done this when I heard my husband's rap.

"'Put out the light,' he motioned. 'And keep him out of the room at all hazards,' he added, in the lightest of whispers.

"I did as he bid, and succeeded in getting another moment alone with him.

"'Have you her veil?' he asked.

"I had not, and knew not where to find it.

"'I must have one,' he said, 'to throw over her face.'

"I guessed him the one I had intended to wear myself. He took it, and I hastened to gather up my own clothing and leave the room.

"When I went back again it was with Peter. Remembering that Dr. Molesworth, in all probability, knew nothing about the house we were in, I took occasion to ask this man, as he lifted in my trunk, who was in the kitchen. He answered, 'No one but the caterers, ma'am.' After which I inquired if the back stairs were clear, and being told they were, advised him to take the trunk down that way, to which he replied that he intended to. I finished by asking him to get around with the carriage to the side entrance, where I should have some money to give him. Thus, I fled the back stairs and gave to Dr. Molesworth, listening near, a hint of the way he should go. I suppose he acted upon it, but never having had the opportunity to speak to him again alone, I do not know anything more about it than the rest of the world.

The Foolish Virgin BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright 1913 by International News Service

SHE deliberately blinds one lovely eye on the side where Love sits in the balance, hardens her tender heart against the panting of his golden head upon her breast, and sees only the glitter of that which clinks in the swollen bag on the other measure!

Sometimes she ties the blindfold, lifting her white arms about her own eyes.

Sometimes some ambitious relative, singing all the while a little song about using one's head and not the heart, smothering her rebellious "nays," knots the cloth over the eye of her heart so she is blind to that side.

"Foolish Virgin," the living gold of Love's head is a sweeter thing to hug to your breast than the cold gold in the swollen bag.

UP to date, the women members of the church to which Daysey Mayme Appleton belongs have tried every known means to raise the church debt except putting air bags under it.

They have taken clothes they didn't want to a rummage sale where they exchanged them for garments discarded by some one else and which they didn't want.

Every woman has made a perfect cake which she donated to a cake sale, returning home with a cake not fit to eat, which was made and donated by some other woman.

They have given white sales and bazaars and teas and dinners and socials, and have taxed the men till the men would stand no more, causing Daysey Mayme to reproachfully ask, "The Lord loves a cheerful giver, but where does He find any?"

Financial matters in the church were at a particularly low ebb, and it became imperative to at once raise a pot of money. That the preacher was aware of this was apparent in a sermon in which he paid the women a high tribute. A preacher always pays the women high tribute when there is money to be raised.

"I will give an entertainment," said Daysey Mayme. "The woman who is devoted to church work doesn't neglect her affairs as much as the man who is devoted to politics. I will sacrifice some of my time to the church."

She called the women together. "I will put on 'The Dandelion Blossom,' a little operetta of my own composing," she said graciously. "The cast calls for three hundred children.

"I have figured that with three hundred children in the cast six hundred parents will attend. Every child has at least two grandparents, which means twelve hundred more in the audience, or eighteen hundred.

"We will add two brothers or sisters for every child, an addition of twelve hundred, which swells the attendance to three thousand. I have taken no account of uncles, aunts, cousins, relatives by marriage, friends, the strangers within our gates, etc., but, allowing five of these to each child we have fifteen hundred more, or a total of forty-five hundred, and this makes no allowance for the curiosity seekers, the neighbors, etc.

"Figuring on an admission of"——but here she was overcome by her dreams of wealth and fainted away.

"I have a brain," she said to her mother that night, "that could float the national debt."

—FRANCIS L. GARSIDE.

But Mother Did Not

When the new minister made his first pastoral call at the Brownings' he took little Anna on his knee and asked her if she had a kiss for him. But the little girl refused to kiss or be kissed. She squirmed loose and ran into the next room, where her mother was putting a few finishing touches to her adornment before going into the drawing room to greet the clergyman.

"Mamma," the little girl whispered, "the man in the drawing room wanted me to kiss him."

"Well," replied mamma, "why didn't you let him? I would if I were you."

Thereupon Anna ran back into the drawing room, and the minister asked:

"Well, little lady, won't you kiss me now?"

"No, I won't," replied Anna promptly, "but mamma says she will."

INDIGESTION, GAS OR BAD STOMACH

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin ends all Stomach misery in five minutes.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

A Clear Complexion

Ruddy Cheeks — Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician.

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter that one's system collects.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing result.

Thousands of women, as well as men, take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets now and then just to keep in the pink of condition.

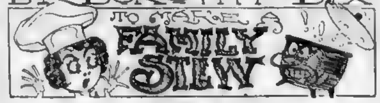
EVERYBODY'S COOK BOOK BY DOROTHY DIX



IN most households the principal article of diet is the family stew, and this is served up morning, noon and night. [illegible] in the season, out of season, and [illegible] strawberries, it appears to always be in season, and on tap, so to speak.

Every family has its individual recipe for family stew, which varies according to the tastes and appetites of the individuals. [illegible] making this [illegible] dish, and [illegible] housewives they can be [illegible] to never fail if faithfully followed.

The most popular and familiar form of the family stew is what is known as Family Stew a la In-Law and is made as follows:

Select one mother-in-law of the hard shell and [illegible] see that her eyes are keen and that she has plenty of tongue, and is [illegible] that the Almighty gave her a commission to run the universe. The best variety of mother-in-law for this purpose is the one known as the Ar[illegible] and who [illegible] against everything she doesn't want to do herself.

Having selected your mother-in-law, take her home with you and plunge her into the family circle, which will immediately begin to simmer and bubble and show signs of boiling over.

Then throw in for seasoning a ton of unsought advice from mother, a bushel of interference in the affairs of the household, a peck of [illegible] and an unlimited quantity of "mother says you shouldn't smoke because it's a sinful waste of money and injures your health," "mother says that you shouldn't drink beer with your dinner because every drunkard starts on his downward career with beer," "mother says that she thinks it VERY STRANGE that, although you leave your office at 5 o'clock, you don't get home till 6.30," or "mother says that a woman should stay at home all day and attend to her house instead of going downtown like you do"; "mother says you spend too much time doing your hair"; "mother says that she is sorry to see that you are wasteful, and that you use your best china every day."

Of course if a little higher flavor is desired you can stir in a sister-in-law, or two mothers-in-law, but one in-law seasons it up quite strong enough for the ordinary palate and makes a perfect family stew.

The second variety is called Family Stew a la Financier. This also constitutes the daily food of most families, who prepare it after this rule:

Take a family with champagne tastes and a beer income, or else a husband with a padlock on his pockets and an extravagant wife, throw in a lot of bills, preferably bills from dressmakers and milliners, and stir them all together in a mix-up.

Add one pint of the vinegar of temper, one pound of the spice of reproaches, a quart of tears and a few grains of cash doled out very carefully.

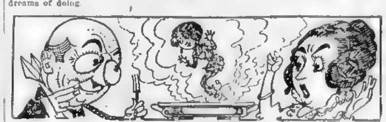
Flavor this sauce with enough remarks such as "What did you do with that quarter I gave you week before last?" "You are too much of a tightwad to give ME a decent dress, but I notice that you can loosen up when it comes to a question of golf clubs and fine dinners for yourself," until it is as bitter as gall, and then serve while it is piping hot.

One of the great advantages of family stew is that a little of it goes a long way, and nobody ever asks for more, which cuts down the high cost of living.

Another variety of Family Stew is that called Family Stew a la Affinity. This is compounded of a tall blonde peach, with a willowy figure, generally of the chorus girl species, or else of a matinee actor, with padded shoulders and a soulful look, or a pianist with yards of lanky hair. It is flavored with jealousy and love notes, and soul yearning and general tommy rot. This dish, when done, is served up on a divorce court summons and garnished with a rail road trip to Reno.

The Family Stew a la Affinity, however, is too expensive for poor people, and, like truffles and champagne, is mainly partaken of by the rich, who in consequence are great sufferers from indigestion of the affections and gas about the heart.

One of the chief recommendations for a Family Stew is that it can be made out of nothing at all. Some men and many women are adepts at this sleight-of-hand cookery, and it must be said for the men that when they give their attention to making a Family Stew they can make more of it and make it hotter than any poor bungling amateur of a woman Family Stewist ever dreams of doing.



Household Suggestions

To keep butter cool, dissolve a little saltpetre in cold water, put this in a large bowl and stand the basin containing the butter in it, allowing the water to reach nearly to the top of the butter bowl. Cover the small bowl with a piece of muslin, placing the ends to rest in the saltpetre water. This will keep it as cool as if placed on ice.

To clean much-soiled hands do not go to work roughly with brush and soda water, but loosen the dirt by rubbing the hands well with sweet oil, or even lard or dripping. Then wipe off the grease as much as possible with a piece of soft paper or old rag, and wash the hands with warm water and soap.

When you clean the ebony brushes on your toilet table run a little vaseline over the backs before you wash the bristles, as this prevents the soda or ammonia in the water injuring the ebony. The vaseline should afterwards be removed by polishing the backs with a dry cloth.

A cure for ants of all kinds, cockroaches and any other pests that invade the pantry is green walnuts. Place in the closets, cupboards or any place where they are likely to be. The cure is effectual and the remedy clean.

When cutting a new brown loaf it is very annoying to find the bread crumble all to bits. The simple but effective remedy for this is to place the knife in hot water for two or three minutes, wipe it and then cut the loaf.

One teaspoonful of vinegar is a substitute for an egg, and makes a cake light in which dripping has been used instead of butter.

Laces can be both "creamed" and "starched" by rinsing them in water to which a well-beaten egg has been added.

French chalk applied to grease spots on flannel suits brings out the grease if the garment is held near the fire.

A cut lemon rubbed on the forehead will cure a severe headache.

Where the Poet Loses Time

"How long does Fennison spend on one of his poems?"

"He told me he spent six weeks on the last one he wrote."

"You don't say!"

"Yes; it took him ten minutes to write it, and the balance of the time he was trying to persuade somebody to buy it."

RESINOL CURED AWFUL PIMPLES

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had been troubled for the past three years with pimples which completely covered my face and neck. The pimples would come out, fester up and cause me to pick at them, forming very uncomfortable. I tried most all kinds of facial creams, but with no effect. I tried a sample of Resinol Soap and Ointment and noticed instant relief. I bought Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment and began the treatment. After using two jars of Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, there was not a pimple to be seen, and now my face is as smooth as if there was never a pimple on it." (Signed) Albert Greenburg, 4167 Frankford ave., Oct. 27, 1912.

For eighteen years Resinol has been a favorite doctor's prescription and household remedy for itching troubles, skin eruptions, dandruff, sores, piles, etc. Stops itching instantly. All druggists sell Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. For free trial write to Dept. 10-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

RHEUMATIC PAINS PROMPTLY DISAPPEAR

Relief Comes After Taking Few Doses of Croxone

It's needless to suffer with rheumatism and be all crippled up and bent out of shape with its heart-wrenching pains when you can avoid it.

Rheumatism comes from weak, inactive kidneys, that fail to filter from the blood the poisonous waste matter and uric acid; and the only way to overcome it is to remove the cause.

Croxone does this because it neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous substances and uric acid that lodge in the joints and muscles, to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism, and cleans out and strengthens the stopped up, inactive kidneys, so they can filter the poison from the blood and drive it on and out of the system.

Croxone is [illegible] for rheumatism, kidney trouble and bladder disorders. You will find it differs from other remedies. There is nothing else just like it. It matters not how old you are, or how long you have suffered, it is practically impossible to take it without results. Relief follows the first few doses, and you will be surprised how quickly all misery and suffering will end.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle and all druggists are authorized to sell it on a positive money-back guarantee. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to overcome the worst backache or urinary disorders.

DIVIDE MINES AND RAILROADS, URGES FORBES

By B. C. FORBES,
Business Editor of the American.

The best way for capital to hasten the arrival of Socialism is for capital to abuse its powers. Among the most effective promulgators of Socialism in this country are the coal barons. Their defiance of the public knows no bounds.

Recently a small State tax was levied upon coal, the aim being to draw for public purposes a negligible part of the enormous profits made by the anthracite trust.

The coal barons, instead of paying up, have coolly shifted the burden to consumers, who will now pay the tax several times over.

What excuse can they offer for their high-handed action? Poverty? Let us see.

George F. Baer, the "divine right" leader of the coal barons, is head of the Reading Company. One of his coal properties issued its annual report last week showing PROFITS OF 48 PER CENT.

The parent Reading Company has just announced earnings of well over $100,000,000 and at least 20 per cent. earned on its stock. Yet Mr. Baer would not dream of allowing his company to pay any tax levied upon it. "Make the public pay" is his dictum. And he has succeeded thus far.

None of the other anthracite properties are starving. Delaware, Lackawanna & Western earned fully 33 per cent., it reported not long ago.

The coal barons have over-reached the mark. Over-reaching usually has disastrous results, they will learn some day.

Separation—real separation—of coal mining from railroading should be insisted upon uncompromisingly by the Federal government.

'TRANSPORTATION ONLY' NEW ELLIOTT PLEDGE

A pledge on the part of President Howard Elliott that the New Haven Railroad—when a financial adjustment of $115,000,000 had been made during the next eighteen months—proposed "to confine its activities to the transportation business" today attracted much attention from students of the New England railroad situation.

President Elliott, who spoke before leaders of New England finance, commerce and transportation at a banquet given by the Boston Chamber of Commerce at the Copley Plaza, promised that the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission would be carefully studied by the New Haven management and conclusions reached as rapidly as possible. Already some steps have been taken toward closer supervision of the details of the operations of the properties, he declared.

"Arrangements must be made between now and June 1, 1914," said President Elliott, "to pay off or renew obligations on the New Haven Road of $46,023,750 and on the Boston & Maine and Maine Central of $29,000,000, and new money should be obtained for use in the next eighteen months to buy equipment and make needed improvements: at least $25,000,000 for the New Haven and $15,000,000 for the Boston & Maine.

"When the money needed is furnished the management proposes to spend it prudently in improving and perfecting properties now owned. The management proposes to confine its activities to the transportation business."

Has Faith in Future.

"I hope most earnestly that the management of the railroad can act so as to deserve your approval in the future."

President Elliott was greeted by "I've Been Working on the Railroad," by a band and the diners. Among them were: Vice-President Coolidge, Vice-President Henry S. Dennison, Treasurer Daniel D. Morse, Transportation Manager David O. Ives and Secretary James H. McKibben of the Chamber of Commerce; President Samuel Rea of the Pennsylvania system, James H. Hustis, the president-to-be of the New Haven; Morris McDonald, president of the Boston & Maine; H. M. Biscoe, the new head of the Boston & Albany; representatives of many boards of trade, Henry L. Higginson, Colonel William A. Bancroft, president of the Boston Elevated; Colonel William A. Gaston, Edmund Billings, George W. Anderson, John H. Corcoran, president of the State Board of Trade; Edwin U. Curtis, collector of the port; George H. Ellis, chairman of the legislative committee on railroads; A. Lincoln Filene and Edward A. Filene, George von L. Meyer and Eugene V. R. Thayer.

President Elliott said in part:

"I have faith in the future of New England and in the good sense and judgment of her people.

"Should capital be found that is willing to invest in steamer lines sailing between this port and other parts of the country and of the world, there will be no effort made by this management to discourage such investment.

"No more important work faces the management than to create a staff of officers that can carry on the work of upbuilding this property and have it so organized that when for any reason one man retires there is another to take his place. Equally important is the work of encouraging the great army of employes and of inspiring them with a feeling of loyalty to New England and to the railroad, and of making safe the conditions under which they work.

"Every effort will be made to build up a complete staff of officers and men from those now in the service and in New England, men who know the local conditions, and who will respond loyally to suggestions for the closest, most efficient and economical operation.

A public opinion that will impress officers and men with the fact that reasonable rules and regulations in the interest of safeguarding human life and of efficient operation must be made and obeyed, and that swift punishment will be meted out to all, whether directors, officers or employes, whether members of labor unions or not, who fail to respond to that public opinion, is of vital importance to the welfare of all. Sentiment of this kind and less insistent demand for high speed will do more to insure safety than steel cars and automatic signals.

That the present rates of the roads under his direction are too low, and that higher rates should be established is also the belief of Mr. Elliott. In making a plea for higher rates he said:

Should the commission—federal or State—make a positive declaration that rates may be advanced so as to permit the properties to meet all of their obligations, pay a fair return to stockholders and leave a balance for improvements, they will do much for the entire country and particularly for New England.

Such a declaration will at once inspire confidence and give to existing securities a better standing than they now have both here and in Europe; and will help to market new securities upon an interest basis more favorably than is now possible, because of the uneasiness of the minds of investors about the future net earnings of the railroads.

Explaining his attitude toward the Interstate Commerce Commission and the State commissions, Mr. Elliott continued:

Transportation Is Business.

Some of the difficulties and inadequacies of the transportation machine of the United States today are the result of drifting away too far from the idea that transportation is business, which, in the long run, must be governed by the same great human and natural laws that affect all human affairs.

In saying this I do not wish to be understood as meaning that there should not be supervision and regulation of the great public service corporations, and that changing conditions do not make necessary changes in method and in law.

But I do say that care should be taken not to have that supervision and regulation go so far that it practically takes the real power of management away from those who have invested their money in the business.

So long as they have their money invested, so long as they give adequate, reasonable and safe service at rates that will permit of gross earnings sufficient to pay expenses, taxes, interest on debts, take care of depreciation and obsolescence and pay a reasonable return to the owners, they must have the right to decide many important questions, particularly those relating to the details of service, the organization of the staff, and the rules and regulations under which the staff and employes [illegible] work to produce the greatest [illegible]y and safety.

'Let Public Opinion Hold All to Safety Rule,' Says Elliott

A public opinion that will impress officers and men with the fact that reasonable rules and regulations in the interest of safeguarding human life and of efficient operation must be made and obeyed, and that swift punishment will be meted out to all, whether directors, officers or employes, whether members of labor unions or not, who fail to respond to that public opinion, is of vital importance to the welfare of all. Sentiment of this kind and less demand for high speed will do more to insure safety than steel cars and automatic signals.—President Elliott of New Haven Railroad.

'FOLLIES' FULL OF GIRLS, JEST AND SINGING

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

If you start at the beginning and stick to the finish you will discover that Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies" is about three hours of melody and jest—three hours of frolic strewn with girls. To attempt to describe the "Follies" would be as foolish as the entertainment itself, which reaches the theatrical high-water mark in the matter of filling an evening with nothing in particular—except girls.

You can easily enjoy the advanced ideas in frivolous entertainment that Mr. Ziegfeld devises, for he builds his "Follies" close to the ground, where popular taste is plentiful. He takes good care not to soar beyond the reach of any mind—no mental gymnastics are required in following the "Follies." But, of course, that is an old story.

If you pass, for a moment, from the girls who fringed the stage to the relatively less important principals, you will discover a few real gems in Mr. Ziegfeld's professional family. Yes, indeed, you will. There was Frank Tinney, for instance, who last evening turned a good share of the performance at the Tremont into a riot of black-face fun that caught a willing audience by its ears. Mr. Tinney was a brisk worker in the cause of simple entertainment, and if you didn't laugh at his chatter it was because your liver was balky.

You could also manage to forget the girls when Leon Errol came into view with that familiar alcoholic load he has carried so faithfully for several seasons. While Mr. Errol makes intoxication a fine art, it is really about time for him to climb on the wagon. The fact that he was humorous and not gross saved his performance.

Mr. Errol likewise contributed his annual joy to the "Follies" in the form of sensational dancing.

When the entertainment fell into periods of dignity—which were both brief and infrequent—Jose Collins, who knows how to sing, did it for all she was worth. Similar mention may be made of Elizabeth Brice. These two attractive young women dallied with high notes, while the test of the show was catching its breath.

Mr. Ziegfeld may have produced better "Follies" in the past, but the series of 1913 will, in many respects, hold its own in the deadly parallel that is bound to be raised. In its bewildering, flashing parade of stunning girls, in sensational costumes, the present is not to be outdone by what has gone before. There was much for the eye to feast upon at the Tremont last evening, not the least of which were the silken legs that shot into high altitudes. The tendency toward negligee in the "Follies" continues merrily, in spite of the approaching Winter, although a reforming note has been sounded in the matter of hosiery. Stockings are being worn this season.

While the "Follies" has neither reason nor sense, it has qualities of genuine entertainment that will keep it on the friendly side of playgoers. Its nonsense may be overwhelming, but it is easy to take at any time.

By trying to outdo himself each year, Mr. Ziegfeld's task has reached the point where it is no longer safe to depend upon a swarm of good-looking girls and a few comedians. That he has managed to keep so close to his own record in novelties is a tribute to his ingenuity as a showman.

But don't overlook the large item of girls in their scarce and flimsy raiment. They are still on the job.

TODAYS STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

There was a better undertone to stocks this morning, although a number of issues failed to retain advances attained around the opening. Locally the price range was narrow at the start and business dull. The list did not average as strong as that in New York. At the end of an hour here New Haven was up ⅜ and Boston Elevated was down ½. Mines ruled rather weak, Osceola and Quincy declining a point each and Butte & Superior, Calumet & Arizona and North Butte sustaining smaller losses. Alaska Gold and Granby were unchanged, as was Old Dominion. The copper metal market was firmer and fortnightly foreign statistics told of a large decrease in the supplies of Europe.

When the morning was half over in New York gains were still general. Among them were Chesapeake & Ohio 1, Canadian Pacific ⅜, Southern Pacific ½, Union Pacific ½, Missouri Pacific ½, Reading ⅜, American Can ⅜, Amalgamated ⅜, and Utah Copper ⅜. At 58⅜, Steel was down ⅛.

New York Opened Higher.

There was a better tone to the New York market at the outset and sentiment reflected the increased cheerfulness shown in trading in London. One of the financial features of the day in the British metropolis was the keen demand for gold on the part of Continental nations. Paris is buying stocks of railroads running through southeastern England, it is cabled, because of greater hope that a tunnel will be constructed under the English Channel. There was repurchasing of American stocks in London, and Canadian Pacific rallied there.

When New York opened most issues advanced and several which have been under pressure for several days were quoted higher. Early gains included Amalgamated ⅜, American Beet Sugar ⅜, B. & O. ¼, Canadian Pacific ⅝, C. & O. ¾, St. Paul ⅜, Chino Copper ⅜, Erie ¼, Illinois Central ½, Interborough pfd. ⅜, Missouri Pacific ½, People's Gas ½, Reading ½, Southern Pacific ⅜, Union Pacific ⅜, Steel ⅜, and Utah Copper ¾. General Electric shaded fractionally and Rock Island was unchanged.

The Curb was firm.

Fight Over Cotton Tax Futures.

It is believed that the Senate may not concur in the compromise on the cotton futures tax and that the proposed restriction upon market operations in that staple may go over until the next session of Congress. President Wilson succeeded in getting the House to pass his substitute for the Clark amendment to tax deals in cotton futures, but the vote was a close one and many Democrats are dissatisfied. To get the votes he needed Leader Underwood told the Democrats that the substitute for the Clark amendment came from the White House.

"It was presented to me by President Wilson," he said, "with the request that I accept it and urge its acceptance by the tariff conferees. I think that it is preferable to the Clarke proposition. I am opposed to legislation that would destroy the cotton exchanges and leave the cotton growers at the mercy of the spinners. I am opposed to any legislation to restrict their market.

"There is now no longer staple cotton sold on the exchanges, and the growers of such cotton have no way of telling what price they may get for their crop. This would be the condition if we should destroy the exchanges. Evils existing in connection with the operation should be regulated."

"If you want to continue gambling in cotton," said Representative Garner of Texas, "pass this regulation bill, but if you want to stamp it out vote for the Clarke proposition. Half-way measures will prove of no effect."

Outlook in the Senate.

As to the outlook in the Senate on the cotton futures tax, if it concurred in the action of the House a further session of the conferees would not be necessary and the bill would be sent to the White House in short order.

If the Senate insists upon the Clarke amendment, the conferees will be so instructed, and after agreeing to the report in all other respects the tariff bill would be sent back to conference for settlement of the Clarke amendment. The programme then would be for the House managers to offer to recede from their disagreement to the Clarke amendment and to concur with the amendment which would be the House substitute.

To this the Senate managers would not agree, but would submit a counter proposition and offer to recede from their own amendment altogether. To this the House managers in the end would agree and a report would be sent back to both houses eliminating the Clarke amendment as it now stands, and the bill would become law without any cotton tax legislation.

London Copper Quotations.

When the London copper warrants market opened it was firm and spot and futures were each up 1s.

According to fortnightly statistics, European stocks of copper at the end of September, including Hamburg, Rotterdam and Bremen, had decreased 2,174 tons, while supplies afloat had decreased 1,945 tons, making a total decrease in the visible supply of 4,119 tons. European stocks totalled 27,819 tons on September 30, compared with 31,938 on September 15. On October 1, 1912, they totalled 47,945 tons.

It is said that small orders for electrolytic were received in this country yesterday at 16⅞ cents a pound. Small dealers and second hands have been offering metal at 16½ cents. Yesterday's sales at the top price were by large agencies for December delivery.

Financial News in Brief.

Dividend payment today by 104 railroads, industrial and public service corporations total $52,928,150, and distribution of that kind to be made in October will be around $180,000,000 in all. Among corporations which will make payments today, but did not do so a year ago, are: Bethlehem Steel Corporation, California Petroleum, Continental Can Company, S. S. Kresge, A. B. Kirschbaum, Remington Typewriter common, Tobacco Products and Willys-Overland.

Trustees of the Salem Savings Bank have declared a semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent., payable on October 22 next.

53 Teamsters Get Union Strike Order

Strike orders were issued to the fifty three teamsters employed by the S. S. Pierce Grocery Company today. The union claims that twenty-two now are out—a statement emphatically denied by S. L. Miller, of the firm, who declares that not one man deserted his post and that no strike exists. The officers of the union assert that nine of their members were discharged since last Sunday, for joining the union. They further declare that this was done in an attempt to scare the firm's employes into deserting the organization. All of which Mr. Miller brands as being absolutely untrue. He declares that the firm knows nothing of the formation of such a union among its teamsters, and that there is no strike of any kind on at either of its three stores.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The experimenters at a New York automobile school who found the cost to average $.0045 a mile had greater good fortune and considerably less expense than the ordinary automobile owner has. They reported that there was an average of 5,542 miles on eleven plain tread tires and 7,972 miles on four tires of the non skid type. The greatest mileage recorded for any single tire was 9,307 miles and the least 3,250 miles.

The tests were made on cars used for instruction purposes. Such favorable results are all the more surprising in as much as to quote the school principal, H. C. Brokaw: "Easy and skilful handling of the clutch and brake will save much of the wear and tear on tires. Even the best tires will wear out quickly if the driver uses the brake and clutch or drives against the curb." Surely the "learners" do all the things likely to wear out tires extra fast. Ease and skill are hardly the qualities of a beginner.

Automobile owners in almost every city in the country are beginning to display a beautifully engraved plate showing that they are contributors to the Lincoln Highway fund. The plate is attached to the dashboard of the contributor's car. One of these plates, together with a contributor's engraved certificate and a membership card, is sent to those who contribute $5 or more to the $10,000,000 now being raised for this coast-to-coast highway. At the national headquarters of the association in Detroit it is reported that nearly $5,000,000 has been pledged or is in hand.

The decennial reunion of the "Mudlarks" will be held in New York city on Thursday, October 9. This is the date of the second of the world's series baseball games in New York city, and the "Mudlarks" will attend this game in a body. All of those who were connected in any way with the memorable New York-to-Pittsburgh endurance run in October, 1903, are invited to attend.

It has been impossible to get in direct touch with all of those who are eligible and those who have not received invitations are requested to communicate with R. H. Johnston, No. 1879 Broadway, New York, and state whether or not they will attend.

NOW IS TIME TO SWAT FLY, SAYS CASSIDY

There are two cases of infantile paralysis in Quincy, several more in Brockton, and Worcester has but recently checked an epidemic. Science has proved beyond question that infantile paralysis is spread by the stable fly. Mr. Cassidy urges you to co-operate now to exterminate the fly.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY

Now is the time to swat the fly. The approach of cold weather is driving flies within doors. They are preparing to hibernate for the Winter. A fly killed now means numberless flies fewer next Summer.

Someone with a liking for calculation has figured the increase of to one from the ordinary fly. The first day of last May let us assume, a female fly flew into a decaying manure pile to deposit her eggs. Had the manure been properly screened she would have been denied her favorite laying place.

But it's easy enough for a fly to find unscreened manure piles, so we will assume she deposited her six sets of eggs; each running from 120 to 150; that each egg produced a fly; that each female thus born repeated the process undisturbed; that succeeding generations kept up the process and that until today not a single fly has died.

Had this happened, this article would never have been written. The AMERICAN would not have been printed. You and I and everybody we know would be dead. For every square foot of habitable land on the globe would be buried more than forty feet deep in flies.

Cold Calculation.

This is not fancy. It is cold, accurate calculation and given us as the issue of that old lady fly 200,000,000,000,000,000.

An almost impossible task, you think, to exterminate that unthinkable number of flies. Yet Cleveland, O., has practically exterminated the fly and has the reputation of being the "first flyless city in America."

Dr. Jean Dawson, a teacher of hygiene in the Cleveland Normal School, is the originator of the crusade. She formed the Junior Sanitary Police of a select number of boys and girls in the schools. These police made a thorough canvass of the city, advising merchants and housekeepers how to clean up breeding places and destroy house flies.

Last year was the first serious attack on the problem. This year the work has been continued. The effect has been a noticeable decrease in flies. As compared with former conditions, Cleveland may be said to have no flies.

The thousands of children educated by pamphlets, talks and practical illustrations of the real danger of this most deadly enemy of man, were the real effective force for this extermination.

The children went out and reported to their parents in which stores flies were found. The parents sent to these stores a card provided, telling of the presence of flies.

Now Is Time to Start.

There was a mad scramble to clean up. For when flies begin to interfere with profits, flies go.

Cleveland sees the end of the fly in sight. And what Cleveland has done, Boston can do. Flies play no particular city as a favorite. Today is the time to start next Summer's campaign. Every pair killed now means thousands fewer next year. Every swat means less annoyance, better health, fewer deaths and a fuller assurance of reasonable happiness.

Had the manure piles of Quincy Point, Atlantic, Worcester and Brockton been properly screened, those communities would not now be battling with infantile paralysis.

This experience this Fall ought to teach them to take better precautions to exterminate the fly. Now is the time they should start. Next Summer may be again too late.

FLORIDA PALM BEACH COUNTY

AMERICA'S WINTER GARDEN

Let us mail you some literature describing the Magic City of LAKE WORTH, near the great resort of Palm Beach. Less than fourteen months old, it has a population of nearly 700, with more than 150 buildings. The State of Florida and our Company are spending considerably more than one million dollars in improvements near this new city. We are 300 miles south of Jacksonville on the Florida East Coast railroad, below the killing frost line, at the home of oranges, grapefruit, tangerines, pineapples and winter vegetables. A five-acre grapefruit grove will make you independent within five years. Buy a lot for winter home in the paradise of America. Easy terms.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN BOSTON OCTOBER 1, 1913

The American's NET PAID Circulation Now Over 400,000

The average daily NET PAID circulation of the Boston Evening AMERICAN for September IS OVER 400,000 copies. This is the number of papers actually sold. This is the second largest circulation of any daily newspaper in America, being exceeded alone by the New York Evening Journal.

This circulation is conservatively a hundred thousand more than all the other Boston evening newspapers combined and over three hundred thousand more than the next highest evening paper.

The AMERICAN does not state its circulation in GROSS or PRESS RUN figures, customary with other Boston papers and which are so misleading, but gives the number of papers ACTUALLY SOLD, waste and free papers of every kind and description deducted.

We are not boastful of this great circulation, except as it bespeaks the confidence of the people of Boston and New England and gives us an opportunity for greater service to the community. Every thousand new readers added to our family means an added responsibility which we recognize and appreciate to the fullest degree.

The Evening AMERICAN is good. But it can be still better---and is going to be. The circulation is great, but it can be greater---and is going to be. In the meantime we think the people of Boston and New England can have a reasonable and justifiable pride in the fact that the SECOND LARGEST DAILY NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION IN THE UNITED STATES HAS BEEN ACHIEVED HERE.

Incidentally, the NET PAID circulation of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN is greater by over 50,000 copies than the net paid circulation of any other Boston Sunday newspaper—and it's growing fast.

Whitman, Not Jerome, Should Act for New York County in the Thaw Case

How long will Jerome be permitted to make a fool of New York? Who before ever heard of an escaped lunatic being chased by a special attorney general, an army of sleuths, touring cars and special trains?

Who is to pay for all this splendor? The unspeakables behind Jerome are paying for it now; but they confidently expect the State to reimburse them.

Thaw killed a man tenfold as bad as himself. Two juries refused to convict him, the second creeping aside by finding him "not guilty, but insane."

Whatever Thaw might have been when he killed White, he appears sane now. "Dangerous maniac!" cry his enemies. And for six years, under conditions calculated to try the temper of the sanest, Thaw hasn't raised voice or hand against any man.

Where does Jerome get his pull with the New York officials? What are the unseen forces that incline governors, judges and attorneys-general to jump to do his bidding and foot his bills? A taxpayer's suit to uncover the truth in that mysterious connection would be a timely good thing.

Dutchess County has already rebelled. So long as Jerome pursued Thaw as an escaped lunatic the State met the cost. But when, at a Jerome suggestion, the compliant Conger put the chase upon the ground that Thaw was a fugitive from Dutchess justice, it opened a new chapter. Dutchess County in that case must pay for Jerome's sleuths, touring cars and special trains.

The Dutchess County taxpayers went on the warpath. They didn't want Thaw back. A storm blew up about the Congerian ears. Conger, defending himself, said that he had made an agreement with the Governor, the Attorney-General and the Comptroller of the State to meet all Thaw chase charges, including Jerome's fees. Not a dollar would fall upon Dutchess.

The taxpayers were not appeased. The law declares that Conger, in his application for a requisition, must state that the expense is to be shouldered by his county. Conger did so declare in black and white. The thing was settled; Dutchess must stand the shot. Governors and Attorneys-General, State Comptrollers and District Attorneys are doubtless great people. Still, they are hardly great enough to divert State funds to county purposes in the teeth of statute.

Conger's "agreement" will hardly hold. Whatever Carmody may say or think or seek to do, Governor Glynn, when the time comes, will be guided by the law. He will not turn the State's money over to Carmody, Jerome and Conger to be disposed of by "agreement." This is not a government of "agreement," even when the high "agreeing" parties are Conger, Carmody and Jerome.

Dutchess having gone as far as she will, Jerome now asks Governor Glynn for a special New York County grand jury. If it be granted, he will go over District Attorney Whitman's head and perform before it as "Assistant Attorney-General."

Jerome claims to be after indictments against what suppositious ones connived and conspired at Thaw's escape. The true reason which prompts Jerome is a desire to save his threatened face. In Concord, true to a poker-playing instinct which caused his arrest at Coaticook, he was moved to make a bluff. He told the Governor of New Hampshire that a Dutchess County indictment had been found against Thaw.

Jerome believed, apparently, that Governor Felker would weakly take his word. The cool Yankee proved too old a hand, however. He continued the hearing until October 6, and, as though New Hampshire had been Missouri, insisted that Jerome "must show him."

This sudden conservatism vastly disconcerted Jerome. There had been no Thaw indictment in Dutchess. Now, in a frantic effort to recover himself, he asks Governor Glynn to turn over to him the indictment machinery of New York. With it he might hope to help himself out of the Concord hole he is in.

There are things which Governor Glynn should consider before saddling New York County with the cost of freeing Jerome from the trap into which he has so bumptiously thrust his foot. New York County already has a District Attorney. Also, he has demonstrated that he can do all the public wants done with grand juries.

While Whitman prevails no Jerome reason could exist.

Nor is the return of Thaw to Matteawan of such paramount local importance as to call for a special Attorney-General, a special grand jury, plus special orders and interferences on the part of the Governor. If Jerome is in a Concord corner, he placed himself there. Being there, it in no wise becomes the Glynn duty to rescue him at the public expense.

Why, when all is in, should Jerome be mixed up in this business? In their various litigations Carmody was chosen to represent the State and Whitman the County of New York.

It is too much the Albany habit to spend public money for specials to do the work which regulars should perform. If an official is not equal to his position, he might better resign. The people elect one man to do a work, and then he employs another to do it.

Reform is called for in that regard, and where could a better start be made than in the painfully superfluous instance of Special Attorney-General Jerome?

Lively Times in the Show Business

THE LABYRINTH

A TWISTING, tortuous path, and I alone,
My fingers slipping on a quivering cord.
Dark branches high above me twist and moan
A forest reeking with its hidden hoard
Of ghostly treasures—and the way without
Roved over by a Minotaur of doubt.

The slender thread of faith my only guide,
Now pulling taut, now loosening in my hand,
Through twisting labyrinthine ways where hide
The darkest dreams I cannot understand—
Till in the deep eyes of a waiting friend
I'll read their meaning at the journey's end.

Shall We Burn Brieux?

By the REV. C. F. AKED, D. D.

IT is reported that Brieux has been burned! And by women, too! A famous club—so the statement goes—has sat in judgment upon him; pronounced his doom; solemnly burned three of his plays—and sent out the story to the world.

Along with Brieux they burned Elementary Jane. They need not have troubled about her. She is of no account anyway. She is neither good enough nor bad enough to be interesting. And a person who is so misguided as to waste time in reading about her is only a shade less unfortunate than the women who waste time in burning her.

But Brieux!

If the members of this club have books to burn and wish to burn them they are entirely within their rights in carrying out their wish. If they consider these books bad books they have a right to have their opinion respected. But when they make a formal and official act of this burning, make almost a ritual and ceremonial act of protest out of it, and give the news of it to the press; when they wish and show that they wish their act to have a public significance, then the burning of Brieux has interest for us all, and we are entitled to discuss it.

The three plays in question appear to be those three which in an English translation are published in a single volume with the title "Three Plays by Brieux." Mrs. Bernard Shaw is responsible for the translation of one of the three, and Mr. Bernard Shaw writes a long preface of extraordinary interest and power. The plays are called, in this translation, "Damaged Goods," "The Three Daughters of Monsieur Dupont," and "Maternity." The first deals with that terrible disease which follows upon licentiousness; the second with the loveless arrangements supposed to be an integral part of the French marriage system; and the third discusses questions of population and of race suicide from the point of view directly opposed to Mr. Roosevelt's, and in the spirit of Mr. E. E. Rittenhouse, New York Conservation Commissioner, who declares that "What our civilization needs is not larger families, but more and better families."

* * *

About one thing the members of this club are probably as well informed as any one can be, and that is, the enormous demand for the volume. The sales in San Francisco have run to incredible figures. More than twelve months ago one book store told me that they had sold more than five hundred copies of it, and about as many copies of the first play in French. One has to make a guess at the number sold by all the book stores of San Francisco. And then one lets his imagination run wild over the probable number sold in the United States—and then in all countries! The ladies who have made their protest, however, may say that this only emphasizes the need of their protest. But is there such a need?

My attention was first called to "Damaged Goods" by a deacon of my church, a medical man well known in San Francisco and standing high in his profession. He wanted me to preach on the play. I did not dare. But I took the responsibility of recommending the book from the pulpit and of urging men and women to buy it and read it. Seeing that I could not bring myself to preach about it, this physician begged me to deliver an address on it to men only, and to arrange for some woman, by preference a physician, to speak about it to a meeting of women. Here is a view of Brieux different from that of the inquisitors, who burn him; and it is just as much entitled to respectful consideration as theirs. A man, a physician, a deeply religious man, thinks that the pulpit ought to discuss in the course of a religious service which men and women, youths and girls attend, the book which these ladies burn.

One of the really great women of the world, a woman whose name is known on two continents and who is a leader in the social reform movements of the world, saw "Damaged Goods" performed in New York; and she, too, asked me to preach a sermon upon it. This, again, is a view different from that of the ladies who burn Brieux. It is the view which will prevail.

* * *

The policy of hush-up is a dangerous policy. But it has had its day. You need not say "Hush," because nobody means to hush and you can't hush them! And things ought not to be hushed up, either. There is a right way and a wrong way of teaching what we have begun to call "sex hygiene," and it may be that these ladies think the Brieux way is the wrong way. No test would work out unerringly, but roughly this is the test:

Does this or that method of discussing the dark and shameful facts of life, the sins and tragedies which afflict our race, make vice attractive or republic? Does it exhibit depravity in such a way as to excite the morbid curiosity of unformed minds and lure into wrong doing ignorant and impulsive natures? Or does it serve as a beacon light on a rock-bound coast, warning and successfully warning and guiding to safety some who might also be wrecked?

In my judgment the Brieux method is a good method. His warning is well and wisely framed. It is bravely spoken, with true-hearted sincerity. For the man's motive is pure. It is difficult to see what possible harm the reading of Brieux could do to any human being. And it may do a whole world of good.
